

ESTABLISHED IN 1972, THE
CORNELIUS O'BRIEN LECTURE SERIES
OFFERS SUPPORT OF HISTORIC PRESERVATION IN INDIANA

Each year, more than 1,000 Hoosiers benefit from lectures given by qualified historic preservation specialists with support from the O'Brien Lecture Series.

Past lectures have taken place across Indiana and have included topics such as: historic home restoration; historic main street, districts, and downtown revitalization; architectural history; the underground railroad; preservation management; historical landscapes; and cultural heritage tourism.

INDIANA UNIVERSITY

CORNELIUS O'BRIEN LECTURE SERIES

Cornelius O'Brien (1883-1953), was among the first to recognize the need for preserving Indiana's historic buildings and sites.

The O'Brien Lecture Series was established by Mr. O'Brien's daughter Mary (1915-2007), Mrs. John Timberlake Gibson of Washington, D.C., from whom it has continued to receive generous support and permanent endowment beginning in 1984. For many years, the series has enjoyed special assistance from the late Mrs. Cornelius O'Brien as well.

Mrs. Gibsons' interest in historic preservation also found expression in her support for the annual Cornelius O'Brien Conference on Historic Preservation, sponsored by Indiana University, Indiana Main Street, and the Indiana Department of Historic Preservation and Archaeology.

How to Arrange for a Cornelius O'Brien Lecture

With funding from the series, approved groups and organizations throughout Indiana are encouraged to sponsor speakers experienced in historic preservation (broadly defined) for presentations bearing directly on that subject.

Refer to the following checklist before submitting your 1-3 page proposal.

- ◇ The lecturer lives outside Indiana and has demonstrable credentials in historic preservation (broadly defined).
- ◇ The event would not be possible without O'Brien support.
- ◇ The lecturer will be addressing issues directly related to historic preservation.
- ◇ The speaking event is (ordinarily) eight weeks away.
- ◇ The event is free and open to the public.
- ◇ The O'Brien Lecture Series will receive acknowledgement in all publicity materials before and during the event.

- ◇ A 1-3 page resume/c.v. of the speaker has been obtained and is included with the proposal.
- ◇ A detailed travel and honorarium budget has been prepared.
- ◇ A person has been identified to complete all necessary reports and paperwork.

If your event and lecturer meet all the above requirements, we encourage you to submit a proposal today!
