Putting history to work in the world

Connect

As a member of NCPH, you are part of an inclusive and vibrant international public history community. NCPH serves a wide range of practitioners and scholars and helps you connect to each other in new ways. Members establish professional and intellectual networks with deep local roots that can span the globe.

Reflect

NCPH encourages collective conversations about the shape and directions of public history. Members around the world engage in many forms of critical reflection on the field: online at History@Work, in the pages of the journal, at the annual meeting, and more.

Advocate

We are a clear voice for the interests of public history practitioners and institutions. Our members advocate for applying history to contemporary issues; support conversations among policy-makers, strategists, and historians to discuss paths to the future; urge that historical resources be safely preserved and publicly accessible; and affirm the value of history education.

Learn

Through our programs and publications NCPH shares best practices and builds skill sets that help to ensure professional success at all stages of your career. We introduce members to new tools and methods in workshops, at the annual meeting, and in local gatherings. NCPH awards recognize excellence at all levels, while programs such as our networking events aid new professionals.

Annual Meeting and Mini-Cons

Each spring, the NCPH conference brings together hundreds of people for lively workshops, sessions, field trips, and working groups. Members draw on existing and new colleagues and the unique sense of place of the host city to recharge.

Throughout the year, mini-cons provide smaller regional gatherings organized by members and partner organizations.
