BREWERY PRODUCTION ASSISTANT
CARILLON HISTORICAL PARK

Position Description:
The Brewery Production Assistant at Carillon Historical Park in Dayton, Ohio, will assist in the daily interpretation and historic foodways production within the Carillon Brewing Company.

The successful candidate will support the development of interpretive planning and conduct costumed historical interpretation in the form of daily demonstrations, public programs and educational workshops linked to the mid-19th century production of beer, wine, bread and other associated items. The production of these items are intended for tastings and sale. This position works directly with the Head Brewer, the Carillon Brewery Manager and other brewery staff and volunteers.

Additional Duties Include:
• mastering historically accurate information pertaining to Dayton History’s collections and exhibits
• supporting the Head Brewer in working to continually educate Brewery staff and volunteers of the day’s production
• historic foodways, interpretation and program delivery
• physical tasks associated with Brewery operations, as well as program implementation incorporating the Park’s 65-acre campus, including: the ability to lift 50 pounds, chop wood, transfer hot liquids, and build and maintain hearth fires and equipment
• other tasks as assigned

The position is a full-time, permanent, salaried one with the expectation of a minimum 40-hour workweek, evening assignments and a regular Thursday through Monday schedule. The salary range is $26,000-$29,000, dependent upon qualifications. The position carries health, disability, and life insurance benefits that are available after a 30-day introductory period.

Qualifications:
A degree in education, history, or a closely related field, as well as experience in museum interpretation is required. Experience in beer making, wine production and historic foodways is strongly preferred. The individual in this position will have strong communication skills, be efficient, be a problem solver, be able to work with diverse individuals, deal well with the unexpected, and maintain a professional attitude and appearance in all interactions with clients, staff, volunteers, and the visiting public.
