

PARTICIPANTS

FIRST NATIONAL SYMPOSIUM ON PUBLIC HISTORY

PUBLIC HISTORICAL STUDIES PROGRAM

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, SANTA BARBARA, CA.

MONTECITO, CALIFORNIA

APRIL 27-29, 1979

INVITED PARTICIPANTS

Carl Abbott. Professor Abbott currently serves as the Associate Director of the M. A. Program in Public History at Portland State University which offers curriculum in Historical Records and Cultural Resources Management and Urban Preservation and Conservation. Professor Abbott, whose Ph. D. in Urban History is from the University of Chicago, came to Portland State as Visiting Professor in 1978 after several years of teaching at Old Dominion University in Norfolk, Virginia. Professor Abbott has organized and participated in interdisciplinary, policy-oriented study groups and served as a Research Consultant to public and private policy-making bodies such as the Miami Valley (Ohio) Regional Planning Commission and the Real Estate Research Corporation.

Harold (Andy) Anderson. Dr. Anderson, the Corporate Archivist and Public Relations Officer for the Wells Fargo Bank (San Francisco), received his Ph. D. in History from the Ohio State University in 1978. In 1976, while working as a Library Specialist in the Archives Department of the Stanford University-based Hoover Institute, he trained at the Archives Institute of the National Archives. Dr. Anderson is currently serving as Secretary of the Society of California Archivists.

Bruce Babbitt. In 1978, at age 40, Bruce Babbitt became the youngest chief executive in Arizona history. As Attorney General of Arizona, he was first in line of succession when Governor Wesley Bolin died. Governor Babbitt, a Harvard Law School graduate, was elected the state's Attorney General in 1974 and gained widespread recognition for his efforts to establish a statewide grand jury and prosecute land fraud and public corruption. The Governor has had a lifelong interest in Arizona history; he has written and published a biography of Louis Akin, an early Arizona painter as well as a book about the Grand Canyon.

Carl Becker. Professor Becker received his Ph. D. in American History from the University of Cincinnati in 1971. He is currently teaching American economic and technological history at Wright State University (Dayton) with which he has been associated since 1964. Professor Becker has authored studies in the history of technology and, from 1969 to 1971, served as co-director of the National Science Foundation's Dayton Cooperative History Program.

Keith Berwick. Professor Berwick, who received his Ph. D. from the University of Chicago in 1959, after several years of association with Claremont Graduate School now teaches at Pepperdine University. During his career as a historian, Professor Berwick has worked for Colonial Williamsburg, the Social Science Research Council and PBS-TV where he moderated the series "Speculation". Professor Berwick has directed a National Council of Social Studies multimedia project, "The Heritage of the American Revolution", and served on the Western States Council of the Bicentennial Planning Commission.

Albert A. Blum. Dr. Blum, who has served since 1978 as Dean of the Stuart School of Management and Finance at the Illinois Institute of Technology, has had a distinguished career as a Labor Historian. Since obtaining his Ph. D from Columbia University in 1953, Dr. Blum has published extensively in the field of Industrial Relations in America and abroad. Because of his expertise, Dr. Blum has been a member of labor arbitration panels of the American Arbitration Association, Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, and Michigan Mediation Service.

Eric H. Boehm. Dr. Boehm, President of Santa Barbara-based ABC-Clio Publications, Inc., received his Ph. D. from Yale University in 1951. By 1955, he was a professional bibliographer, publishing and editing Historical Abstracts. Along with that journal, Dr. Boehm today publishes and edits four other bibliographic periodicals for scholars in political science and government as well as in history. An expert on information retrieval systems, Dr. Boehm has served as a consultant on computer use and bibliography since 1963.

Raymond S. Brandes. Professor Brandes, the current Dean of the School of Graduate and Continuing Studies at the University of San Diego, received his Ph. D. from the University of Arizona in 1965. His interest and studies in historical archaeology have led him to undertake a variety of preservation research projects including several in San Diego's historic Gaslamp Quarter. Professor Brandes has also served the community of San Diego as a member of advisory committees of the city's Comprehensive Planning Organization and the County's Environmental Analysis Division.

Gert A. Brieger. Dr. Brieger, the Chairman of the unique Department of the History of Health Sciences at the University of California, San Francisco, received his M. D. from the University of California, Los Angeles, his Master's of Public Health from Harvard, and his Ph. D. in history from Johns Hopkins. Dr. Brieger has written extensively on Steven Smith, surgeon and medical reformer, and has contributed to the Western Journal of Medicine and the Dictionary of American History. Among the projects he currently has underway are a biography of Albert Bruce Sabin and an oral history of UCSF.

D. Lydia Bronte. Dr. Bronte, the Associate Director for the Humanities of the Rockefeller Foundation since 1974, received her Ph. D. from the University of North Carolina in 1969. Her field of scholarship is comparative literature; she was associated with the National Humanities Series of the Folger Shakespeare Library from 1971 to 1973. Dr. Bronte authored A Sense of Place, a book published in 1972. Her home now is in Princeton, New Jersey.

Charles Burdick. Professor Burdick, a Stanford University Ph. D. recipient, 1954, has served as Chairman of the History Department, San Jose State University, since 1975. A scholar whose primary research interests lie in twentieth century German military history. Professor Burdick has contributed extensively to the literature of that field. A recent project has brought his studies closer to home, however; his new book, "The History of San Jose University" has been accepted for publication.

Nina Kressner Cobb. Dr. Cobb received her Ph. D. in Modern American History from City University of New York in 1975. She has since worked with Herbert Gutman as a Research Associate for the oral history project on immigrant adaptation to New York City, 1900-1940. She has also served as a Research Associate for the Twentieth Century Fund, identifying public policy issues amenable to book-length treatment and soliciting and evaluating proposals for such public policy books.

Joel Colton. Dr. Colton has been Director for Humanities at the Rockefeller Foundation since 1974 and is a specialist in European history. He received his Ph. D. from Columbia University and taught at Duke University from 1947 to 1974, serving seven years as Chairman of the History Department. Dr. Colton has participated in an array of scholarly and professional activities. Recently, under auspices of the Rockefeller Foundation, he has organized conferences and studies relating to the Humanities. These include Film and the Humanities, The Search For A Value Consensus, and The Contemporary Humanities in an International Context: Critical Issues and Prospects.

Lawrence B. de Graaf. Professor de Graaf has taught history at California State University, Fullerton, since passing his doctoral exams, University of California, Los Angeles. His doctoral dissertation, "Negro Migration to Los Angeles, 1930-1950" brought Professor de Graaf his degree in 1962. While western black history has continued to be his primary professional field, Professor de Graaf has also become actively involved in social science curriculum development and application. He currently serves on the National Coordinating Committee for Promotion of History and, at the 1977 AHA Conference, presented a paper entitled "Historians' Competencies and Career Applications".

James J. Dougherty. Currently Program Officer of the National Endowment for the Humanities, Dr. Dougherty received his Ph. D. from the University of Maryland in 1973. Prior to attaining his office in the Division of Special Programs of NEH, Dr. Dougherty worked as an Associate Editor-Bibliographer for the American Historical Review. In this capacity, he compiled Writings on American History, 1973-1977: A Subject Bibliography of Articles as well as AHR's Recently Published Articles List.

Enid H. Douglass. Ms. Douglas, a lecturer in history at the Claremont Graduate School and Secretary, Assistant Director or Director of the school's continuing oral history program since 1963, is also a Claremont alumna, receiving her M. A. in Government from there in 1959. She teaches a graduate seminar in oral history and lectures throughout the State of California on oral history techniques. A charter member of the Oral History Association Ms. Douglass is its current President-elect. Ms. Douglass's interests extend to preservation and planning; she is an appointed member of the California State Heritage Preservation Commission and a member of the state's Planning Advisory and Assistance Council.

Richard Esparza. Mr. Esparza, the current Director of the Ventura County (CA) Historical Society Museum, attained that post after acting as consultant during construction of the new museum building. Previously, Mr. Esparza directed the Pioneer Southpark City Museum, a restoration project, in Fairplay, Colorado and served as curator for the Denver Historical Society Museum.

Robert Flanders. Professor Flanders, a 1954 Ph. D. recipient from the University of Wisconsin, currently chairs the History Department of Southwest Missouri State University and directs the center for Ozark Studies. In his pursuit of Ozark studies, Professor Flanders has produced a three-screen, multi-image program, "Shannon County: of Home and the River". With NEH grants, he is continuing to develop documentary film presentations of Ozark history and culture for broadcast, perhaps, on national television. His most recent blending of scholarship with the medium of film was an MCH-funded project called, "The Ozarks: An American Region in Transition".

Corinne Gilb. Dr. Gilb is Professor of History and Co-Director of the Urban Studies Co-Major Program at Wayne State University in Detroit. Her 1957 Ph. D. in American civilization came from Radcliffe/Harvard. Prior to that she studied law at the University of California, Berkeley. Her research interests are multiple and include urban government; state, local, and federal courts; industrial relations; taxation; and regional history. Oral history techniques have been part of Professor Gilb's resources since at least 1953. Professor Gilb has been active, academically and politically in reviewing and influencing public policy by lecturing, for example, on "Outside Forces Affecting the Detroit Urban Future: Gloomy or Hopeful?"

Joseph P. Harahan Jr. Dr. Harahan who received his Ph. D. from Michigan State University in 1973, currently serves as the historian, in the Office of the Historian of the Strategic Air Command. In Dr. Harahan's words, "In this office a historian is essentially a writer who contributes chapters to a top-secret, multivolume annual history and who researches and writes assigned monographs. . . both assignments have required extensive research in contemporary correspondence files, interviews with key military officials, review of congressional testimony, and a knowledge of the current periodical literature pertaining to strategic forces and their future."

Dennis E. Harris. Professor Harris, a 1969 Ph. D. recipient from the University of California, Santa Barbara, currently serves as Chairman of the Department of History, Sonoma State University. Professor Harris has devoted much of his professional career to the study of, and curriculum development for, social studies education. He has, for example, helped devise teacher evaluation systems and an instructor's manual, Patterns in American History. Other interests of Professor Harris's are family and local history; he participated in a recent Newberry-NEH conference on college teaching of state and community history.

Gerald H. Herman. Professor Herman received his M. A. in history from Northeastern University in 1967 and has been teaching there since. One of Professor Herman's major fields of academic interest is the use of nonprint media in the teaching of history. His one-hour radio production, "War", presented in honor of Memorial Day 1978, was nominated for a Peabody Award. He has also produced "To Know Thyself", a set of thirty-four video tapes for university instruction in the history of Western civilization, "The Romantic Vision", a three-hour slide and tape show integrating various aspects of romanticism in Europe and America, and three other multi-media/documentary shows.

Don Higginbotham: Professor Higginbotham received his Ph. D from Duke University in 1958 and has been teaching American Revolutionary History at University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, since 1967. Professor Higginbotham has authored or edited several books on the revolution, including an Atlas of The American Revolution (1974) and has published articles in a variety of scholarly journals. His interests include biography, and he has contributed portraits of such historical figures as Daniel Morgan, Francis Xavier Marin, George Rogers Clark, Ethan Allen, John Paul Jones, and Benjamin Lincoln.

Suellen M. Hoy. Dr. Hoy, a 1975 Ph. D. recipient from Indiana University, currently serves as the Executive Secretary of the Public Works Historical Society and as the Assistant Executive Director, Communication Services, of the American Public Works Association. Besides studying the history of public works, Dr. Hoy is actively interested in the uses of history outside the academy. Her paper, "Opportunities in Applied History: State and Local Government", was published in the January 1979 OAH Newsletter. She also chairs the National Coordinating Council for the Promotion of History's Resource Group: State and Local Government.

Richard Jensen. Dr. Jensen is Professor of History and Sociology at the University of Illinois - Chicago, and director of the University's Office of Social and Demographic History and of the Newberry Library's Family and Community History Center. Professor Jensen chairs the Chicago Metro History Fair, in which four full-time historians work with 100 high schools to sponsor exhibits and projects in family and neighborhood history. He chairs the OAH Committee on the Employment of Historians and has directed ten large summer institutes that "retooled" 500 historians in quantitative methods.

Arnita A. Jones. Dr. Jones received her Ph. D. in history from Emory University in 1968. After teaching at Indiana University Southeast for six years, Dr. Jones became the only full-time professional historian on the staff of the National Coordinating Committee for the Promotion of History, sponsored by the American Historical Association. As a staff associate, Dr. Jones's responsibilities include lecturing, coordinating activities of volunteer historian-job identifiers, coordinating activities of fifteen state committees, preparing reports, newsletters, surveys, and other special materials. Her paper, "Clio Confronts Adam Smith: A Survey of National Trends in the Adjustment of Training Programs for Historians", appeared in the January 1979 OAH Newsletter.

Morton Keller. Professor Keller, who received his Ph. D. from Harvard in 1956, has been Spector Professor of History at Brandeis University since 1970. Professor Keller's professional interests include American legal history. He served as a Fellow at Harvard Law School, 1970-71 and again 1974-75 and has written about "The Judicial System and the Law of Life Insurance, 1885-1910" (1963), Reconstruction and Reunion, 1864-88 (1972), and "Corruption in America: Continuity and Change," (1978). His book, The Life Insurance Enterprise, 1885-1910 (1963) won for him the Kulp Memorial Award in 1964.

Richard S. Kirkendall. Dr. Kirkendall, Professor of American history at Indiana University and Executive Secretary for the Organization of American Historians since 1973, earned his Ph. D. from the University of Wisconsin in 1958. His research interests are in twentieth century American agricultural history, the New Deal, and the Truman years. Dr. Kirkendall has also contributed to the historical community by serving on a variety of professional committees. Those on which he currently serves include the Board of Directors, Truman Library Institute, AHA-OAH-SAA Committee on Historians and Archivists, and AHA-OAH Committee on the Defense of the Rights of Historians Under the First Amendment.

Ernest R. May. Professor May, an authority on American diplomatic history, is currently Chairman of the Department of History at Harvard, where he has been professor since 1963. He earned his Ph. D. from UCLA in 1951. In addition to teaching courses on U. S. international relations and the uses of history in public policy analysis, Professor May currently serves as co-director of a project for developing careers in business for Ph. D. 's in the humanities and social sciences, and he is Chairman of the Faculty Committee for the John F. Kennedy School of Government's Executive Program in National Security.

Irvin M. May, Jr. Dr. May, a 1970 Ph. D. recipient from the University of Oklahoma, is currently serving as the research historian for the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station. This position involves the collection and evaluation of records, oral history, and preparing books and articles. To date, Dr. May has interviewed 216 agricultural scientists and Texas farmers and ranchers. Half of these interviews have been transcribed in preparation for Dr. May's ninety-year history of the Experiment Station. In addition, Dr. May serves as the Associate Editor of the Red River Valley Historical Review.

Peter Mellini. Dr. Mellini is a historian of the British empire and the Middle East who received his Ph. D. from Stanford University in 1971. He currently teaches at Sonoma State University. Although Dr. Mellini's research focus has led him to publish primarily in the field of British studies, his scholarly interests also include historic preservation. In 1975-76, he received a grant from the Chancellor's office to formulate a course in historic preservation, and in 1976-77 he received two small grants to continue this work. He now regularly teaches historic preservation as well as courses in Photography in History and Society and Architecture.

Carlotta Mellon. Dr. Mellon, who received her Ph. D. from Claremont Graduate School in 1973, has served as the Appointments Assistant to the Governor (Brown, of California) since 1975. Prior to that appointment, Dr. Mellon taught and served as Director of the San Diego State University oral history program. Her interest in oral history techniques is keen; she has published articles, presented papers, and chaired committees devoted to understanding and perfecting those techniques. In addition, she was a member of the nominating committee of the Oral History Association. Currently, she is a member of the Board of Trustees of Claremont Graduate School.

Knox Mellon, Jr. Dr. Mellon, a Claremont Graduate School Ph. D., taught history at Immaculate Heart College for fifteen years before undertaking the post of California State Historic Preservation Coordinator in 1975. Today he serves as the State Historic Preservation Officer and as the Executive Secretary to the California State Historic Resources Commission. Dr. Mellon has also been involved in state and local historical research and the applications of oral history techniques. He has published an article about "The National Oral History Association and Annual Colloquiums" and has served on a panel discussing "Oral History and the Liberal Arts College."

A. Lloyd Moote. Professor Moote is a French scholar who received his Ph. D. in history in 1958 from the University of Minnesota. Since 1965, Professor Moote has been associated with the University of Southern California where he has taught French and modern European history. He has written and published extensively in his field; his current projects include a full-scale biography of Louix XIII.

Charles Morrissey. Mr. Morrissey, who studied history at the University of California, Berkeley, became chief of the JFK Oral History Project in 1965. Since then he has been involved in numerous oral history projects including the Ford Foundation Oral History Project in New York City, the Christian A. Herter Oral History Project at Harvard, and the Dartmouth College Oral History Project. Currently he heads the Former Members of Congress Oral History Program. Mr. Morrissey is a former president of the Oral History Association. He has also been active in historic preservation, having served on Vermont's Statehouse Preservation Commission and as Vermont's liaison officer for federal historic preservation programs.

J. Meredith Neil. Dr. Neil, a specialist in American architectural history who received his Ph. D. from Washington State University in 1966, currently serves the city of Seattle as Director of its Office of Urban Conservation. Prior to his Seattle appointment, Dr. Neil gained four years of administrative assistance as Executive Director of the Idaho Bicentennial Commission. Dr. Neil's interests include historic preservation; he has lectured under the aegis of the National Trust for Historic Preservation and has published numerous scholarly books and articles which illuminate the significance of America's artifactual environment.

Pat Nolan. Dr. Nolan, who received his Ph. D. in history from the University of Minnesota, is currently the head of the Archives and Special Collections of Wright State University. He also serves as a senior member of the Committee on Professional and Educational Development of the Society of American Archivists.

Robert W. Pomeroy III. Mr. Pomeroy is the Deputy Advisor for the Inter-American Development Bank based in Washington, D. C. . He is responsible for quantitative analysis and management information for the bank's project analysis department. In 1978 he analyzed loans with a combined value of $1.9 billion. In addition to his career as a financial analyst, Mr. Pomeroy chairs the Washington, D. C. area business resource group of the National Coordinating Committee for the Promotion of History. In this capacity, Mr. Pomeroy participated in "Business and History: A Dialogue" presented last year by the Public Historical Studies Program at UCSB.

Glenn Porter. Dr. Porter, a 1970 graduate of the Johns Hopkins University, is currently the Director of the Regional Economic History Research Center of the Eleutheria Mills-Hagley Foundation and is Associate Professor of History at the University of Delaware. Dr. Porter is an active researcher and writer on topics pertaining to American business history. He is currently also serving a five-year term as a member of the Consulting Committee to the National Survey of Historic Sites and Buildings, the U. S. Department of Interior.

Gaines Post, Jr. Dr. Post received his Ph. D. from Stanford University in 1969. Currently he is on leave from the University of Texas (Austin), where he teaches European diplomatic history, and is serving for two years as the Executive Director of the Stanford-based Commission on the Humanities. Dr. Post, who has written about German foreign policy and who is now writing about British foreign policy, helped organize an undergraduate interdisciplinary course on "The Politics and Culture of Modern Germany." Colleagues from the German and government departments cooperated with him in the teaching of that course.

Richard H. Rioux. In 1978, Dr. Rioux received his Ph. D. from the University of Southern California where he is now offering a course entitled "History in the Marketplace." Dr. Rioux works full-time as Chief of Resource Development for the Los Angeles County Department of Community Development, charged with administering programs under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act. In his course, Dr. Rioux and students examine the changing meaning of work in America since World War II. The course is founded on evidence that the world of work has begun to offer greater opportunities for people with functional, rather than just technical skills.

Kenneth F. Rossman, III. Mr. Rossman, an alumnus of the University of Arizona, is the current chief of the Federal Archives and Records Center at Laguna Niguel, California. In this capacity, Mr. Rossman is regional representative of the National Archives with responsibility for historical federal records from Arizona and Southern California, and the pre-presidential materials of Richard M. Nixon. Before serving at the Federal Archives, Mr. Rossman was Archivist Technician at the National Archives in Washington and Archivist of the Lyndon Baines Johnson Library in Austin, Texas.

Darlene R. Roth. Dr. Roth received her Ph. D. in American civilization from George Washington University in 1978. Since 1975 she has been President of The History Group, Inc., a small research firm devoted to public history and historic preservation, through which she devotes most of her time in historical consulting. As Director of the Women's Records Project of Georgia, Dr. Roth has advised numerous organizations and individuals on historical and archival enterprises. The Atlanta Historical Society, WETA-TV in Washington, D. C., and Radio Free Georgia are among the agencies that are Dr. Roth's clients.

Michael G. Schene. Dr. Schene, who received his Ph. D. from Florida State University, has worked since July 1977 as research historian for the National Park Service, Branch of Historic Preservation, Denver Service Center. In this capacity, Dr. Schene performs site investigations and documentary research on the history of parks, sites, and structures and participates in the development of master plans and feasibility studies. Among other projects, Dr. Schene has completed a historic resource study of Olympic National Park, a historic furnishings study of Elkhorn Tavern, and a special study of the historic transportation system at Mammoth Cave National Park.

Ingrid Winther Scobie. Dr. Scobie received her Ph. D. from the University of Wisconsin in 1970. She currently is a lecturer at the University of California, San Diego where she teaches family and community history, a course she developed there. She also serves as interviewer and editor for the Women in Politics Series, Regional Oral History Office of the Bancroft Library at Berkeley. Dr. Scobie's interest in capturing history through oral history techniques is keen; she has prepared manuscripts and talks on the topic, and has worked as a consultant for the Phoenix History Project where she employed those techniques.

Melvin T. Smith. In 1972, Dr. Smith received his Ph. D. from Brigham Young University after preparing a dissertation on the history of the Colorado River. Dr. Smith has served several years as Utah's preservation officer; in 1971 he assumed his present post as Director of the Utah State Historical Society. Historic preservation remains one of Dr. Smith's foremost concerns. He is currently a member of the Officers Committee on Inter-Governmental Relations of the National Conference of State Historic Preservation. Also, as a visiting lecturer, Dr. Smith offered an "Introduction to Public History" this winter at Brigham Young University.

Carl E. Solberg. Professor Solberg received his Ph. D. in Latin American history from Stanford University in 1967. Now Associate Professor at the University of Washington, his major research interests include Petroleum policy in third-world nations, government economic policy formulation in Latin America, and the social and economic development of Canada. Professor Solberg has numerous publications in these fields, including a new book, Oil and Nationalism in Argentina: A History (1979).

Noel J. Stowe. Dr. Stowe, a graduate of the University of Southern California, serves currently as an Associate Professor of history and Director of graduate study at the Arizona State University. Dr. Stowe's research and teaching fields are Western American history and Latin American history. He has recently revised his book, California Government: The Challenge of Change, for a second edition. He also serves now as the Co-Book Review Editor for Latin American Digest.

Martin E. Sullivan. Dr. Sullivan is a 1974 Ph. D. recipient from the University of Notre Dame. After serving the National Endowment for the Humanities in several capacities, Dr. Sullivan became the Director of the Division of Special Programs in December 1978.

The objectives toward which Dr. Sullivan leads this division include expansion of co-operative funding efforts for science/humanities projects; coordination of NEH support for folklore and popular culture studies; and strengthening the participation of humanities scholars in public policy studies through cooperation with groups such as the United States Conference of Mayors and the National League of Cities.

Joel A. Tarr. Professor Tarr received his Ph. D. from Northwestern University in 1963. He is an urban historian who has taught a variety of courses on city development and technology at Carnegie-Mellon University since 1967. Professor Tarr has studied in depth the effects of technological changes in transportation, coal usage, and wastewater management on the shape and quality of the urban environment, and has prepared historical papers on these topics for presentation at scientific and public policy meetings. In March 1977, Professor Tarr presented a paper at UCSB on "The Possibilities for Applied History."

Larry E. Tise. Dr. Tise, who holds a Ph. D. in history from the University of North Carolina, is currently the Director of the Division of Archives and History of the North Carolina Department of Cultural Resources. Prior to this appointment, Dr. Tise served as the Heritage Coordinator and Director of Historical Publications for the North Carolina Bicentennial Committee and as Assistant Director of the Division of Archives and History.

David F. Trask. Dr. Trask received his Ph. D. from Harvard University in 1958 and, until 1976, taught American diplomatic history at several academic institutions. Since 1976, however, Dr. Trask has served as the historian of the Department of State in Washington, D. C. . He is also a member of the Resource Group on Employment Opportunities in the Federal Government of the National Coordinating Committee for the promotion of history. He has delivered talks on "Historians and Policy-Makers," "Relations Between Public and Academic Historians," and "Historians in the Federal Government."

Garrett Weaver. Professor Weaver, who is finishing his doctoral work for the University of North Carolina, is now the director of the historic preservation curriculum at Jackson State University. He is currently engaged in a project to reclaim historic Robertson School.

Craig W. Fuller. Craig Fuller received his M.S. in History at Utah State University in Logan, Utah, and is currently a Ph.D. candidate in History at Brigham Young University. He serves as the Public Education Officer of the Utah State Historical Society.

FACULTY OF UCSB's
PUBLIC HISTORICAL STUDIES PROGRAM

G. Wesley Johnson, Director. Ph. D. Columbia University, 1967. Professor Johnson, whose experience includes family, local, and oral history, leads the two-quarter core seminar in which students undertake an original local history research project with the City of Santa Barbara as their client.

Thomas Fuller, Associate Director. Ph. D. UCSB, 1972. Doctor Fuller's professional interests include local and community history. Besides coordinating the program's conferences and publications, Doctor Fuller also participates in the core seminar.

MEMBERS OF THE COMMITTEE IN CHARGE

Lawrence Badash. Ph. D. Yale University, 1964. Professor Badash teaches the History of Science and Society.

W. Elliot Brownlee. Ph. D. University of Wisconsin, 1969. Professor Brownlee teaches Economic History and Quantitative Methods.

Alexander Callow. Ph. D. UC, Berkeley, 1961. Professor Callow teaches Urban History.

Patricia Cline Cohen. Ph. D. UC, Berkeley, 1977. Professor Cohen teaches Women's History and American Social History.

Otis L. Graham, Jr. Ph. D. Columbia University, 1966. Professor Graham teaches Twentieth Century United States History, and Land Use Planning and Intergovernmental Relations.

Carl Harris. Ph. D. University of Wisconsin, 1970. Professor Harris teaches American Political History and Statistical and Computer Methods.

Wilbur R. Jacobs. Ph. D. UC, Los Angeles, 1947. Professor Jacobs teaches American Indian History.

Robert Kelley. Ph. D. Stanford University, 1953. Professor Kelley (with Professor Johnson, the founder of the Public History Program) teaches American Intellectual and Political History.

Roderick Nash. Ph. D. University of Wisconsin, 1961. Professor Nash teaches Environmental History.

Richard Oglesby. Ph. D. Northwestern University, 1962. Professor Oglesby teaches History of California and the West.

Carroll Pursell. Ph. D. UC, Berkeley, 1962. Professor Pursell teaches the History of American Technology.

STUDENTS

UCSB PUBLIC HISTORICAL STUDIES PROGRAM

First Year Class, 1976-77

M. A.

- Lynn Brady. B. A. , UC Santa Barbara. Ms. Brady served as an intern in the City Manager's office, Ventura, CA, preparing a historical study and inventory of buildings and sections of the city suitable as candidates for historic preservation.
- Mary Burschinger. B. A. UC Santa Barbara. Ms. Burschinger served as an intern in the City Attorney's office in Santa Barbara where she prepared a historical study of the city's pueblo water rights.
- Bruce Craig. B. A. California State University, Northridge. Mr. Craig served as an intern for the National Park Service in Philadelphia where he prepared historical studies of Independence Park.
- Paul D. Friedman. B. A. UC Santa Barbara. Mr. Friedman served as an intern for the Los Angeles International Airport, preparing a historical study of the airport and controversies surrounding its expansion and noise.
- Karen Hermann. B. A. UC Santa Barbara. Ms. Hermann served as an intern for Sambo's Restaurants, preparing a study of the firm's evolution.
- Gregory P. King. B. A. UC Santa Barbara. Mr. King served as an intern in the Governor's Office of Planning and Research, Sacramento, where he studied the state's civil service system and its personnel board.
- Katherine Lord. B. A. Stanford University. Ms. Lord served her internship with the City of Santa Clara's Electric Department where she studied the history of the city's power supply problem and relations with Pacific Gas & Electric Company.
- Todd Shallat. B. A. UC Santa Barbara. Mr. Shallat's internship with the Public Works Department of the City of Fresno led to the publication of his study of Fresno's water rights problems. (M.A. completed 1977)
- Karen Smith. B. A. UC Santa Barbara. Ms. Smith worked as an intern for the Phoenix History Project, preparing a study of an older area of the city, eligible for historic preservation. (M.A. completed 1977)

Ph. D.

- James C. Williams. A. B. University of Oregon. M. A. San Jose State University. Mr. Williams's dissertation topic is the History of Energy Use and Development in California.

STUDENTS

UCSB PUBLIC HISTORICAL STUDIES PROGRAM

Second Year Class, 1977-78

M. A.

Ann Diffenbaugh. B. A. Stanford University. Ms. Diffenbaugh's internship is with Fort Mason, the San Francisco Foundation, where she is assessing community cultural resources.

Richard Forman. B. A. UC Los Angeles. Mr. Forman is serving his internship with a private corporation, Data Products, Inc., where he is establishing a company archives and writing a company history.

Reed Holderman. B. A. California State University, Fullerton. Mr. Holderman's internship was with the National Forest Service for which he conducted oral history research on the Los Padres National Forest.

Paul Israel. B. A. California Polytechnic State University. For his internship, Mr. Israel worked for the Historic American Engineering Record's Survey of California's Department of Transportation Bridges.

Steven Lutze. B. A. Princeton University. Mr. Lutze, for his internship, is studying the development of the computer industry at the Charles Babbage Institute.

Rita Lynch. B. A. Pitzer College. Ms. Lynch served her internship with the Department of Public Works in Kansas City, Missouri where she studied the history of civil engineering.

Kevin McCauley. B. A. UC Santa Barbara. Mr. McCauley's internship is with the Phoenix History Project for which he is preparing a history of the city's administration.

Christopher Nelson. B. A. UC Santa Barbara. For his internship, Mr. Nelson prepared an inventory of historic sites for the history of Santa Barbara.

Gayle Olson. B. A. UC Santa Barbara. Ms. Olson's internship with UCSB involved preparing an oral history of the University's campus police. (M.A. completed, 1979)

Judy Triem. B. A. University of Arizona. An associate of the second year's class, Ms. Triem served her internship under the auspices of the National Trust for Historic Preservation. She worked with the Kansas City (MO.) Foundation, preparing a walking tour of the city's historic or architecturally significant buildings.

Ph. D.

Donald Fitzgerald. B. A. University of Utah. M. A. University of Rhode Island. Mr. Fitzgerald will be investigating California marine history for his dissertation.

STUDENTS

UCSB PUBLIC HISTORICAL STUDIES PROGRAM

Third Year Class, 1978-79

M. A.

- Ken Bryant. B. A. California State University, Fullerton. Mr. Bryant is interested in applying historical methods to public policy analysis.
- John Douglass. B. A. Pitzer College. Mr. Douglass's interests include the policy-making process, historic preservation, and media presentations.
- Robert Hugie. B. A. Southern Utah State College. Mr. Hugie, whose interests focus on historic preservation, will serve as an intern for the Utah State Historical Society.
- Kathy Lang. B. A. UC Santa Barbara. Ms. Lang's interests lie in urban history and historic preservation.
- Judi Ryder. B. A. University of Michigan. Ms. Ryder's interests are labor history and urban and ethnic history.

Ph. D.

- Shelley Bookspan. B. A. Ohio State University. M. A. University of Arizona.
M. C. P. (City planning) University of Pennsylvania. Ms. Bookspan is interested in using historical investigation to effect urban housing policies.
- Rebecca Conard. B. A. California State University, Pomona. M. A. UC Los Angeles.
Ms. Conard's interests are American folklore, local and regional history, and agricultural history.
- Ava Kahn. B. A., M. A. California State University, Northridge. Ms. Kahn's interests include using oral history techniques to study family, community, and social history.
- Karen Miller. B. A., M. A. UC San Diego. Ms. Miller is interested in the study of family and local history as well as public policy formation.
- Stephen Payne. B. A. UC Santa Cruz, M. A. California State University, San Jose.
Mr. Payne is interested in pursuing studies of local and community history, and the application of oral history methods.
- Gayle Olson. M.A. UC Santa Barbara, continuing, second year class.
- Karen Smith. M.A. UC Santa Barbara, continuing, first year class.