

Frequently Asked Questions: First-Time Attendee Guide

2023 National Council on Public History (NCPH) Annual Meeting

Before the Conference

Q: When should I arrive?

A: The conference kicks off with a full slate of workshops and an opening reception on Wednesday, April 12, 2023, so we suggest arriving late Tuesday or early Wednesday. Information for air, car, and rail travel can be found in the preliminary conference Program (page 8).

Q: Where should I stay?

A: NCPH has reserved a discounted room block at the Hyatt Regency Atlanta at a rate of $201/night. The discounted room rate is available through March 22, 2023, or when the block fills, so the earlier you book, the better. Valet parking at the hotel is $55/night. Find more information about parking and transportation at the hotel here.

Q: What does my conference registration include?

A: A full conference registration includes access to all working groups and sessions, the exhibit hall, plenaries, the poster session, and other non-ticketed events. Registrants also receive a conference Program and badge. Special opportunities such as tours, workshops, and meal events may require additional fees. Visit the NCPH Annual Meeting page for more information on registration rates. For other questions on registration, see our General Registration FAQ.

Q: What should I wear?

A: In general, the dress code for conference events is business casual. There is no need to bring a full suit. Be sure to dress in layers; conference centers often range from drafty to stuffy. Tours are likely to be more casual, and comfortable shoes are recommended. In April, a typical day in Atlanta ranges from 50 to 70°F.

Tip: Tours happen rain or shine, so bring a coat and umbrella.

Q: What should I bring?

A: We recommend bringing business cards and résumés for networking. If you plan to use electronics during the day, remember to bring chargers with you. Some attendees also bring a reusable water bottle and snacks with them to stay fresh during the day. In an effort to go green, NCPH does not provide attendees with tote bags, so plan to bring one along.

Tip: 123Print and VistaPrint are two quick, easy, and affordable options for business cards.

Q: Where can I acquire funding for the conference?

A: To save on registration costs, be sure to register during the early bird registration period, which lasts through March 1, 2023. NCPH also offers a limited number of volunteer spots for student members. Conference volunteers receive free registration, but space is limited, so apply early. Check the Volunteering page on the website for updates.

The deadline for the 2023 conference has passed, but consult the NCPH awards page to learn about potential cash prizes and travel grants. Students should contact their advisor, department, student government, or other campus associations to find out if they provide travel grants for conference attendance. Professionals should consult their employers for available funding opportunities.

During the Conference

Q: Where do I check in on the first day?

A: Registration is open from 7:30 am to 6:00 pm on Wednesday, April 12 (check pages 2-3 in the Program for registration times all other days) in the Terrace Foyer, on the Ballroom Level of the Hyatt Regency Atlanta. Give yourself enough time on your first day to register and pick up your conference Program and badge. Be prepared to wait in line at registration, especially Wednesday evening and Thursday morning.

Q: What types of activities are available?

A: There are four basic types of activities: Sessions, Working Groups, Workshops, and Tours. All topics and presenters are listed in the preliminary conference Program. Generally, conference sessions last for 90 minutes.

Check activity times closely. The final conference Program you'll receive at check-in lists times and locations for all conference events. Times and locations occasionally shift after the Program is printed, so make sure to check the onsite Errata sheet for updates.

Tip: You can use the Schedule-at-a-Glance section of the Program (pages 2-3) to choose which sessions and events you would like to attend. Also, keep an eye out in the spring for our mobile app!

- Sessions are included with your conference registration, so you do not need to sign up in advance. Some sessions feature scholars presenting a paper or a case study; others are composed of practitioners in the field reflecting on a problem/solution they have encountered or engaging with each other and the audience in a structured conversation format. Tweeting during the session is encouraged, unless the presenter specifies otherwise; Twitter handles will be provided in the Presenter Index at the back of the final Program to facilitate this. If you choose to leave a session, please be courteous as you exit. Everyone is welcome to ask questions! If a speaker is an expert in a subject related to your field of study, consider taking the opportunity to meet them after the session.
- Working Groups are designed to facilitate extended conversations on particular topics in a seminar-like style and run for two hours. They feature a group of ten to fifteen discussants, selected in October. Each participant prepares a case statement to share with the working group. These case statements are circulated and discussed among participants prior to the group's meeting at the conference, and everyone is prepared to participate actively in the discussion. Working groups are open to other conference-goers (unless otherwise noted), but we ask that they respect the facilitators' need to potentially limit audience participation.

- Workshops feature outside presenters giving a “how-to” talk on a specific topic and are usually hands-on and participatory. Note that these sessions usually require additional fees, and it's best to sign up before the conference. Workshops are generally longer than a typical conference session, often lasting a full morning or afternoon. See the list of workshops in the preliminary conference Program (pages 24-25).
- Tours are organized by the Local Arrangements Committee to take participants to points of interest in Atlanta and further afield. Most tours are between two and four hours long. These events require advance registration and additional fees. Spaces can fill up quickly, so it's best to register before the conference. See the list of tours in the preliminary conference Program (pages 22-23).

Q: Do I have to attend each session?

A: No, you do not need to attend each session. There are sessions occurring concurrently in every timeslot, so you couldn't attend each session even if you wanted to. You should consult your Program ahead of time to plan a schedule of the sessions that most appeal to you. It's tempting to pack your schedule full, but you may get as much benefit from taking a break to interact and network with other public historians.

Q: Do I have to pay for each session?

A: Breakout sessions, such as panels and working groups, are included with conference registration. Other events like trips and workshops require an extra fee. Some events, including Speed Networking, are free but require you to sign up in advance of the conference.

Q: Can I bring my spouse, child, or a guest to an evening event or tour?

A: Yes. Guest registrations and tickets to select events can be purchased for non-public historians who would not otherwise attend the conference. Guests can be added in the online registration system for $40, but they will also need their own ticket for any ticketed event or tour.

Q: Why is my name not on the conference participant list?

A: During the registration process, every attendee is asked if they want to omit their personal information from the participant list. If you choose this option, you will still be registered for the conference but will not be listed. Be sure to check your email for your confirmation. If you cannot find it, please email ncph@iupui.edu or call (317) 274-2716.

Q: Are there any events tailored to first-time attendees or graduate students?

A: There are several special events to help new conference attendees network with other professionals and graduate students. See some recommendations below. For more information, check the preliminary conference Program (pages 17-20).

Wednesday, April 12

- The First Time Attendee and Conference Connections Meet-Up is included with your ticket to the Opening Reception. Both events will be located in Regency V, on the Ballroom Level.
- Attend the Opening Plenary in the evening. This year's plenary, Considering the Revolution: The Rhetoric of Freedom, will be the third in a series of five roundtables about interpretation of the American Revolution in light of the 250th anniversary. Read more in the preliminary conference Program (page 17).

Thursday, April 13

- The New Member Breakfast gives new members a chance to meet with members of the NCPH board, staff, and Membership Committee for breakfast to learn more about NCPH's leadership and prepare for the first day of sessions.
- Out to Lunch is designed to help public history professionals meet fellow colleagues in an informal setting. Prior to the event, attendees will be placed in groups of 4-5, which will then meet for lunch at a restaurant of their choosing. For more information, visit the Eat and Engage page.
- Check out the NCPH Members Meeting to meet some of NCPH's leadership and learn the latest news for the organization.
- At the Poster Session, attendees – many of them graduate students – present their work in an informal setting. The deadline to submit a poster for the 2023 conference has passed, but this is a great opportunity to see what your peers are working on and find inspiration for future projects.

Friday, April 14

- Speed Networking connects graduate students with professionals in a relaxed setting to learn about the careers available to public historians. Sign up in advance with your conference registration, as spots go fast. Check out our video for more information.
- Out to Lunch – Grad Student Edition is designed to help public history graduate students meet fellow students in an informal setting. Prior to the event, attendees will be placed in groups of 4-5, which will then meet for lunch at a restaurant of their choosing. For more information, visit the Eat and Engage page.
- Attend the Public Plenary in the evening. Conference attendees and members of the public are invited to join this free moderated conversation. The plenary, After the Party It's the Waffle House: Interpreting and Preserving the Hip Hop South, will be about interpretation of hip hop – a genre with a major impact on Atlanta – and community building. Read more in the preliminary conference Program (page 19).

Saturday, April 15

- The conference continues through Saturday. Keep that in mind when making your travel plans, and don't leave early!
- The Awards Breakfast and Keynote Address are open to all conference registrants, though a ticket is required for the breakfast meal. This year's keynote address will be delivered by Torren Gatson and Tiffany Momon, co-directors of the Black Craftspeople Digital Archive.

Q: How can I network while at the conference?

A: One of the most important aspects of attending the conference is the opportunity to network with academics, professionals in the field, and other graduate students.

The conference is an opportunity to network for potential interviews in the future, not a job interview. Be tactful in handing out your business cards and résumé. After sessions, most presenters linger, providing an excellent opportunity to connect. Another useful approach is to introduce yourself to the person you would like to meet and get their card. Then, if you want to pursue a conversation, you may contact them a few days later.

If someone you follow on Twitter is at the conference, consider introducing yourself. It's an easy way to start a conversation. Live tweet during the sessions (unless the presenters say otherwise), and engage with other attendees' tweets. See our social media guide in the preliminary conference Program (page 7).

Q: How should I spend my evenings?

A: Most days, sessions and workshops end at 5:00 pm; there are some events each day that last later into the evening. Dine Arounds, which stretch later into the evening on Thursday, April 13, facilitate small group discussions on pre-determined topics over dinner at local restaurants. You can sign up for a Dine Around at the registration desk on the first day of the conference. For more information, visit the Eat and Engage page.

You will have free time in the evenings, and we recommend that you take advantage of this time to explore Atlanta and get to know your fellow attendees. Find a list of the recommended restaurants and things to do in the preliminary conference Program (pages 10-11 and 14-15).

Tweet to #ncph2023! If you're enjoying a particular session or event, let other people know about it. Attendees who don't have a Twitter account can still follow real-time conference discussions online. Twitter is also a great way to find fellow attendees who share your interests.

After the Conference

Follow up with your new contacts. Send an email to those you've networked with. Follow them on Twitter and connect with them on LinkedIn.

Complete the post-conference survey. NCPH emails a post-conference survey to all registrants. This survey is important because it helps us improve future conferences. Please take a few minutes to share your experiences.

Q: How can I present next year?

A: The deadline for submitting a proposal for the 2024 annual conference in Salt Lake City, Utah is July 15, 2023. You can find session participants through networking or by submitting an early topic proposal by June 1, 2023. If you are interested in presenting next year, make the most of the conference by making contacts with potential presenters through the various social events and by contacting this year's speakers. Please keep in mind that proposals which present a diversity of voices and experiences are more likely to be successful.

Presenting a poster at the Poster Session is a great way for new professionals to present research or projects at NCPH. The deadline for submitting a poster session for Salt Lake City will be in September.

Q: Where can I learn more about attending conferences?

A: There are many links that provide additional information on attending conferences. Here are a few worth investigating:

- ProfHacker has a comprehensive collection of articles on preparing for, attending, and live-tweeting conferences.
- About Live-Tweeting:
  - Ernesto Priego, "Live-Tweeting at Academic Conferences: 10 Rules of Thumb"
  - American Historical Association, "The Dos and Don'ts of Live Tweeting at an Academic Conference: An Update"
  - Juraj Holub, "10 Easy Tips for Live Tweeting at Events"
- Tips and Survival Guides:
  - Megan MacKenzie, "Survival Guide for Grad Students: The Essential Clothing, Food, Shelter, and Networking Dos and Don'ts"
  - Janice Klein, "Packing Shoes for Conferences and Other Somewhat Serious Thoughts on Professional Footwear"
  - Leslie Ye, "14 Helpful Tips for Getting the Most Out of a Conference"
  - Elisabeth Pain, "How to Get the Most Out of Attending Conferences"
  - Ethan Morris, "5 Tips for Making the Most Out of Your First Conference"
  - Bob Beatty, "Name Badge Faces \*OUT\* \(& Other Conference Suggestions...\) Beatty's Maxim #5"

---

Do you have other questions about lodging, transportation, Atlanta, or the conference?

Please visit our conference homepage for answers to all of your questions. You may also contact us via ncph@iupui.edu or (317) 274-2716.