

Assistant Professor

Apply On-Campus Boston, MA Full time Posted Today R0011012

The Department of the Global Humanities at Suffolk University invites applications for a full-time, tenure track position at the rank of Assistant Professor beginning July 1, 2027 in the College of Arts & Sciences (CAS). We seek a teacher-scholar with research focus in Global History, broadly defined. Applicants should be able to teach and lead initiatives related to one or more of the following topic areas: Africa; Europe and European empires; Latin America; the Middle East; and/or Russia/the Soviet Union. We are looking for candidates who can expand the Department's history offerings beyond its current strengths in East Asian history and twentieth-century U.S. history.

We especially welcome candidates who could teach courses and lead initiatives in our Public History concentration for the History major; in other opportunities associated with the Department of the Global Humanities (e.g. with the Global Cultural Studies, Language, and/or Philosophy programs); and in the College of Arts and Sciences (e.g. Environmental Studies, Economics, Political Science/Legal Studies, Black Studies, Economics, and/or Women's and Gender Studies). Public history opportunities could include planning and leading Travel Seminars and Study Abroad/Away experiences and contributing to the already-established Bialystok Cemetery Restoration project. We are particularly interested in candidates who bring relevant experience and expertise that could prepare them to cultivate a possible partnership with the new Holocaust Museum & Education Center (set to open in Boston in 2027) and/or to plan new public history, experiential learning, and service learning initiatives in the greater Boston area and beyond to create meaningful experiences and professional development opportunities for our students.

Candidates should provide evidence of commitment to excellent teaching and scholarly potential, including a research agenda and plans for peer-reviewed publication. Candidates should be broadly trained to teach courses across the Department curriculum in research methods, professional skill building, and at the introductory, upper, and capstone levels including courses supporting the University's first year and general education program. The successful candidate will teach courses that support the History major and minor, including the Global History concentration and the Public History concentration, as well as the Global Cultural Studies major and minor. The candidate should be ready to contribute to a multidisciplinary department alongside students and faculty colleagues in History as well as in Languages, Global Cultural Studies, and Philosophy. In addition to demonstrating excellence in teaching and research, the successful candidate is expected to advise and mentor undergraduates from a variety of disciplines and fields of interest within the Department, and engage in service with the Department, College and University. The workload for this position is 45% teaching, 35% research, and 20% service with a 5-course teaching load per year.

Candidates must hold a PhD in History or a relevant field (e.g. Environmental Studies; Black Studies; Global Studies; Latin American Studies; Studies of Women, Gender, & Sexuality; or another relevant field) by the beginning of the 2027-2028 academic year. ABD candidates in the final stages of completing their degrees will be considered. Experience teaching undergraduate students preferred. Application should be made through the Suffolk University Human Resources' Careers at Suffolk website.

A complete submission will include: cover letter; CV; Teaching Philosophy; Diversity Statement; a statement of research interests and agenda; student course evaluations (if available); a sample syllabus; and 3 letters of reference. For full consideration, applications should be submitted by October 15, though applications will be accepted until the position is filled. Initial interviews will be via Zoom followed by on-campus interviews.

The salary range for this role is $80,000 - $90,000.

Salary Transparency

Suffolk University provides salary ranges as a good faith estimate of what it reasonably expects to pay for a role at the time the position is posted. The actual salary offered to the selected candidate will depend on various factors, including, but not limited to, the position's scope and responsibilities, the candidate's experience, education, training, and applicable legal requirements. The listed pay range reflects base salary only and does not include additional benefits or compensation.

Equal Opportunity Statement

Suffolk University does not discriminate on the basis of race, color, ethnicity, religion, national origin, sex, gender, gender identity or expression, sexual orientation, age, disability, military status, or any other characteristic protected by applicable law. We welcome applications from qualified candidates of all backgrounds, perspectives, and experiences. The University strives to recruit, develop and retain faculty and staff committed to educational excellence, the robust exchange of ideas, and engage in membership in a diverse and inclusive community.
