The Board of Directors of the National Council on Public History has appointed John R. Dichtl as the next Executive Director of NCPH. John comes to us from the Organization of American Historians, where he has worked since the early 1990s, most recently as Deputy Executive Director and Acting Executive Director. While at OAH, John advanced various programmatic initiatives and improved the organization's operations significantly. He worked productively on strategic planning initiatives, led development efforts, and handled a myriad of responsibilities ranging from staff management to marketing and outreach. John has developed wide-ranging networks of historians, teachers, and public history professionals over the years. John will begin his work at NCPH in January 2006.

John Dichtl brings to NCPH many years of experience working to promote the field of history and interconnect a wide variety of historians and others employed in the historical community. Since 1992 he has served in various capacities at the Organization of American Historians, where he has helped to lead the organization during a period of extensive growth in membership, revenue, and programmatic reach. Dichtl held positions ranging from deputy executive director for the past six years to interim and acting executive director as well as assistant director and assistant editor of the newsletter. He went to the OAH, in Bloomington, Indiana, from Capitol Hill, where he worked for two years as an editor for the United States Senate Judiciary Committee. Dichtl received his Ph.D. (2000) and M.A. (1993) in American history from Indiana University and is a graduate of Carleton College in Northfield, Minnesota, where he earned a B.A. in European History.

> continued on page 13

CREATING A HOMELAND SECURITY HISTORY OFFICE

by Priscilla Dale Jones, Ph.D.
Priscilla.Jones@dhs.gov

The terrorist attacks of 11 September 2001 led to a massive reorganization of the U.S. federal government, which included the establishment of a new department and, eventually, a new federal history office. The Homeland Security Act of 2002 established the U.S. Department of Homeland Security as the fifteenth Cabinet-level department, and Tom Ridge, the former governor of Pennsylvania, was sworn in as the first Secretary of Homeland Security on 24 January 2003.

In 2002, before the Homeland Security Act was signed, members of the federal historical community began expressing interest in establishing a DHS history office. Dr. Bruce Craig of the National Coalition for History, for example, wrote to Senators Robert C. Byrd and Joseph Lieberman and other legislators encouraging them to include a history office in the new department. In the end, the act did not include such a provision. But Senate Report 108-86, which accompanied the fiscal year 2004 appropriations bill for DHS, contains language requested by Senator Byrd encouraging Secretary

> continued on page 2
Ridge to establish a departmental history office. The report maintains that a knowledge of history is critical to effective policy making, makes recommendations as to the mission of the history office, and briefly comments on funding requirements. For some time, several senior DHS officials in the Office of the Secretary and specifically in the Office of Public Affairs had been interested in adding a historian to the staff. In early October 2003, DHS advertised for a civil service historian to be the department historian and to establish the DHS history office.

I was then nearing my tenth anniversary as a historian and, more recently, contract histories manager for what is now the Air Force Historical Studies Office at Bolling Air Force Base in Washington, D.C. I had joined that office after receiving a Ph.D. in history at the University of Cambridge and an M.A. in modern European history at the University of California, Los Angeles.

I applied for the position at DHS in October 2003, and during the last of three interviews, I met Secretary Ridge and my future supervisor, Assistant Secretary for Public Affairs Susan Neely. The Chief Historian position is situated in the Office of Public Affairs (OPA) and was until recently a direct report to the Assistant Secretary. Ms. Neely’s access to and close working relationship with Secretary Ridge proved of great benefit to my initial work and to the establishment of the DHS History Office.

During the first year of my tenure, I was granted frequent access to senior leaders in a variety of settings—including unclassified and classified senior leadership meetings and briefings and a number of other important events and milestones—and the history office made significant progress. I attribute this access to the keen sense of history on the part of the first team of senior DHS leaders, particularly—but by no means exclusively—Secretary Ridge, Deputy Secretary James Loy, and Ms. Neely.

As I settled into the department, I focused my initial efforts on four priorities: establishing the Historian position and setting its direction; records preservation; planning the oral history program; and staffing the DHS History Office.

The first priority was to draft a strategic plan for my position and the DHS History Office. The plan highlighted a primary function and unique contribution of federal government historians in departments like DHS: the production of classified monographs for the benefit of current and future senior leadership. I briefed Secretary Ridge and his senior leadership on the strategic plan on 14 April 2004. Four months later, the secretary signed a charter that I had drafted, which formally established the position of Historian and set out its core responsibilities. These include producing classified and unclassified historical studies and providing historical information and analysis to support senior leadership decision and policy making.

The second priority was to assist in preserving DHS records. Again with the support of senior leadership, I successfully urged the dissemination of an official memorandum from the under secretary for management to employees on their responsibilities to preserve federal paper and electronic records. I also worked with a variety of colleagues and DHS offices to draft and implement formal exit procedures aimed at preventing the loss of electronic records of departing employees, particularly senior leaders.

The third priority was to establish an oral history program. The Office of Public Affairs engaged the services of a contract transcription firm, and I began in the summer of 2004 to converse with the first team of senior leaders and with other current and past employees who had first-hand knowledge of the work of the Office of Homeland Security and the establishment of the department. As of late summer 2005, the program has helped to preserve the recollections and perspectives of almost forty members of the first team of senior leaders and staff, a great many of whom are no longer with the department.

The fourth priority was to promote the hiring of additional staff. In late July 2004, senior OPA leadership decided to assign a full-time, permanent civil service slot to the History Office and to set aside a contract position for an archivist. The staff historian position was advertised in December 2004. Meanwhile, DHS had awarded a contract for archival services to History Associates Incorporated of Rockville, Maryland. Elizabeth Borja began work at DHS in January 2005 and has made great progress since in establishing the History Office archive.

In early 2005, Secretary Ridge and a large number of other senior leaders left, or were soon to leave, the department, and the History Office suffered a setback with respect to the staff historian position. A highly qualified candidate had been selected, but the public affairs office was unable for budgetary reasons to move forward with an offer of employment.

Additional changes in DHS senior leadership came with or soon after the arrival of Secretary Michael Chertoff and his team. The Office of Public Affairs has been reorganized, and the Chief Historian now reports to OPA Chief of Staff Joe Adamoli, rather than to the new Assistant Secretary, Brian Besanceney.

Invitee lists to senior leadership and other high-level meetings have also undergone revision; consequently, the Historian no longer attends these meetings. This poses a serious impediment because it denies the Historian insight into the decision-making process and the mood of the leaders. The department will be served best if it maintains the most accurate and objective historical record possible. Such a history is invaluable not only for future DHS leaders to learn what really happened in the past and why it happened, but also as an indispensable source in answering congressional and other governmental and public inquiries.
HOW THE HOMELESS OF CENTRAL FLORIDA EXPERIENCED THE THREE HURRICANES: CHARLEY, FRANCES, AND JEANNE

by Luke Leonard and C. Reider Howe
diggidy01@yahoo.com

The homeless have existed on the fringe of society with only begrudging recognition at the best of times. In 2004, with three major hurricanes, Charley, Frances, and Jeanne, impacting Central Florida and causing significant and long term damage and costing Floridians millions of dollars in lost wages, property damage, and insurance claims, the plight of the homeless was conspicuously absent from the myriad of media coverage and the overflow of good will. Free from the bonds of material possessions and the concerns that accompany home ownership in the aftermath of the storms, this Project sought to understand the effect the three hurricanes had on this invisible section of the population.

We interviewed residents of the Coalition for the Homeless in Orlando, Florida. By exploring how this homeless community endured those storms, both similarities and stark differences emerged between how the homeless population prepared for the hurricanes, survived their immediate effect, and dealt with the aftermath of property damage and cleanup.

The most immediate difference was our study population’s lack of material possessions such as homes, cars, or land. This condition tends to make the transient community very unfettered by concerns to stay in one place, lacking strong ties to the community and largely free from material responsibilities. The first two interviewees were Robert Lee Fox, or “Hercules,” from Virginia and Patrick Salier, from Denver, Colorado. Hercules, a good-natured man who has fallen on hard times and who, in the past, indulged in drug use, but now he seems to be partially reformed. At the time of interview, he had only been in Florida for two months and possessed numerous manual labor skills that were useful in the aftermath of the hurricanes. Patrick was also a skilled laborer and came to Orlando to assist with the cleanup of Charley. Patrick seemed focused and determined to succeed, and he repeatedly stated his desire to obtain work and support himself. Our second two interviewees were Joe Jackson, a resident of the Coalition for all three hurricanes, and Farley Wattsman, from Miami, Florida. Joe’s right arm has been crippled for five years, impairing his ability to work. He has been homeless for that time and shares his time between the Coalition and Lakeside, a mental health facility. Farley has stayed at the Coalition for at least a few months and worked there.

Universally, their experience with the hurricanes was positive. Their lack of material possessions meant fewer concerns. A perfect example of the lower concerns was Hercules who when asked what he did to prepare for the hurricane he said, “I got beer and sat out and watched the storm from the place I was staying.” For those homeless who stayed at the Coalition, they were provided with alternative shelters and food. Some residents chose to assist the Coalition while others either chose to endure the storm on their own or simply waited for the Coalition to take care of them. Both Hercules and Patrick had relatives and stayed with them, but Joe and Farley stayed at the center and assisted in the preparations for securing the Center against the hurricanes. Furthermore, all four reported that they found work after the hurricanes and that people who probably would never have interacted with them were genuinely appreciative of their work clearing debris from their properties. Hercules and Patrick also reported an increased level of social freedom.

Hercules and Patrick passed the time consuming beer during the hurricanes. This behavior was holistic and seemed directed to a joy of life and recognition of a force of events beyond their control. Thus, this allows us to come to the conclusion that the residents of the Coalition for the Homeless were, in fact, better off than the average population: better cared for, free from worry about the destruction of their homes and loss of material possessions, and enjoyed an elevation in good will toward them from the general public.

Finally, a Manager of the Coalition for the Homeless, Leo Devlin, admits that the strain was probably easier on the residents than on the general population because they did not have to concern themselves with the everyday living. Also, since the homeless population is used to nonstandard living conditions, being without electricity or three meals a day is not a change, so they were able to adapt to the change in lifestyle much easier. Therefore, the homeless population of the Center for the Coalition of the Homeless seemed to have less disruption of their lives than the general population directly after the hurricanes, and that allowed them contribute rather than become a hindrance during the aftermath of the hurricanes for the greater population of Orlando.

1 Project was for a class in Oral History asking the question “How did the hurricanes of 2004 affect the community of Central Florida?” We chose the homeless population as the focus for our project.
2 The Coalition for the Homeless is a complex of shelters located on 639 W. Central Blvd in Orlando, FL.
3 For the first interviews with Hercules and Patrick, Reider and I asked over twenty people if they had stayed at the Coalition during any of the hurricanes before we discovered our interviewees.

> continued on page 15
Dear Friends and Colleagues:

I am writing to inform you that this will be my last communication with you as Executive Director of NCPH. I will be departing at the end of this year after 11½ years of service. These have been wonderful and challenging years for me personally and professionally, and we have accomplished much working together to advance public history and the profession.

When I began my professional career in 1982 as a historian at Conner Prairie Museum, I had never heard the term ‘public history.’ Even though it had been an emerging field of study in the 1970s, we never discussed it during my academic training. I soon heard about NCPH, began reading The Public Historian, and quickly became more aware of the rapidly developing profession. I never dreamed that I would eventually have the opportunity to lead this organization and to assist in building the profession.

In the summer of 1994, I received an invitation to become the Executive Director, replacing Elizabeth Brand Monroe who led NCPH when it came to Indiana University Purdue University Indianapolis (IUPUI) in 1990. NCPH was a small operation at the time with a half-time director, a half-time secretary, a graduate intern, and a budget of approximately $24,000. Things have changed dramatically over the past decade and NCPH has become the organization that represents public history educators and practitioners.

Where does NCPH stand today?

- NCPH developed a web presence and launched the H-PUBLIC listserv to keep members informed about news from the field.
- NCPH became involved in several grants projects, including work with the National Park Service and Parks Canada and partnering with IUPUI on a Teaching American History grant.
- The NCPH administrative assistant became a fulltime position with greater responsibility for coordinating the annual meeting and special events.
- NCPH participated in advocacy on numerous issues pertaining to history and the profession.
- The NCPH Endowment has grown from a few thousand dollars to over $270,000, assisted in part by a challenge grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities.

I am very proud of what we have accomplished together since I began in August 1994. This could not have happened without the help and support of many of you and of the dedicated, hardworking NCPH staff. I would like to extend my thanks to:

- The many graduate interns who have worked in the NCPH office. They have contributed much to the success of NCPH and I hope that their experience with NCPH has enriched their understanding of public history.
- Joyce Haibe, Tina Trettin, Kelly Barnes, and Gayle Rhynearson who served as NCPH administrative assistant in the early years of my tenure.
- The deans of the IUPUI School of Liberal Arts who provided support for this organization and my own work.

I am, however, most grateful to two specific individuals who have made my work with NCPH easier and more enjoyable. Phil Scarpino, chair of the History Department, has been a strong supporter of NCPH for years and worked with me to make many things possible for our ever-expanding operations here. I am deeply indebted to Dana Ward who has served as NCPH’s first fulltime administrative assistant. Since November 2000, she has brought order and efficiency to the NCPH Executive Offices, provided excellent services to our members, worked well with the board and our many committees, and assisted us in building a stronger association.

I feel very privileged and honored to have been given the opportunity to lead this organization for the past 11 years and I am very proud of the many accomplishments that occurred under my watch. I wish you and new executive director John Dichtl the best in your continued pursuits of expanding and promoting public history.

With warm regards,

David G. Vanderstel

dvanders@ncph.org

---

by David G. Vanderstel
dvanders@ncph.org

NCPH developed a web presence and launched the H-PUBLIC listserv to keep members informed about news from the field.
Without doubt, this year has been one of significant change for NCPH. Our most recent long range planning process brought us to the realization that, after a quarter century of sustained growth, the time had come for the kinds of thoughtful, difficult, and carefully planned adjustments that all healthy organizations need to make from time to time.

So, we strengthened our committee structure, assessed and confirmed the viability of our partnerships with the IUPUI School of Liberal Arts and the University of California Press, and—perhaps most importantly—redefined the relationship between our board and staff. We changed the presidential and vice presidential terms of office from one year to two in order to provide more continuity on the board, and we redefined the Executive Director position as a chief executive officer rather than as a chief administrative officer.

The change we made to the Executive Director position was a major one, and it necessitated a national search. Over the course of the spring and summer, Vice President Bill Bryans and a search committee consisting of NCPH and IUPUI professionals recruited, interviewed, and assessed a number of very impressive candidates. After careful consideration, the committee recommended the appointment of John R. Dichtl. And in October the Board of Directors approved the recommendation unanimously.

Anyone who knows John Dichtl knows that he is the right person for this job. He is no stranger to NCPH and the public history field. As Deputy Director and Acting Executive Director of the Organization of American Historians, John has been a longtime advocate of public history. In recent years, OAH, like the American Historical Association and other professional groups, has certainly made progress in promoting historians' engagement with the public. But John believes, as many of us do, that it has always been up to NCPH to lead the way in making connections between the history profession and the public we all serve, and he has the clearest and most genuine of visions for building those connections.

Certainly, John appreciates the value of working collaboratively with other organizations, not only with academically oriented groups but with organizations like the American Association for State and Local History, the American Association of Museums, the Society for American Archivists, and the National Trust for Historic Preservation. He has a demonstrated record of developing viable partnerships: he worked closely with Dwight Pitcaithley to create meaningful cooperative agreements with the National Park Service, for example, and he developed other partnerships between OAH and the Gilder Lehrman Institute, the College Board/AP U.S. History, and other groups. And he wants to work with universities to promote better training for public history professionals and with groups like the National Council for History Education to develop public history inspired curriculum materials and education initiatives for K-12 teachers.

In addition to his vision, John has the considerable skill it takes to direct an organization like NCPH. At OAH, John learned well how to work productively with a board of directors, a committee structure, and the professionals who constitute OAH's membership. Among other things, he raised and managed funds, conducted membership surveys, organized focus groups, ran strategic planning exercises and staff retreats, managed marketing and outreach initiatives, planned annual conferences, developed precollegiate training opportunities, and managed a growing staff.

John is, of course, a trained historian. He received his doctorate in history from Indiana University. He will no doubt put his historian's skills to good use as he directs NCPH, and he will also draw upon them at IUPUI, where he will teach and take on other responsibilities in the history department. IUPUI remains our valued partner, and NCPH owes its continuing gratitude to Robert White, Dean of the School of Liberal Arts, and Philip Scarpino, Chair of the History Department, for their support of this position.

Along with our officers and board members, I can say with confidence and enthusiasm that NCPH looks forward to a bright future with John Dichtl as our Executive Director. At the same time, I can say with certainty that everyone associated with NCPH is enormously grateful to David G. Vanderstel for the many contributions he made to our organization during the past eleven years. NCPH membership grew by nearly thirty percent on David's watch, and the budget expanded by an extraordinary five-hundred percent. We also have an endowment that now totals more than $270,000. Programs and activities have improved and grown since 1994, as has our executive staff. And I know that David takes great pride in his role in securing NCPH membership in the American Council for Learned Societies. In short, David leaves NCPH in better shape than when he arrived, and we all recognize and appreciate his accomplishments.

& continued on page 15
NCPH would like to congratulate the following NCPH institutional members for receiving awards from the American Association for State and Local History:

University of Arkansas at Little Rock, Department of History for winning a Certificate of Merit for their Public History Program and the special project "Life Interrupted: The Japanese American Experience in World War II.

Indiana Historical Society for winning a Certificate of Commendation for the Indiana History Train.

Arizona Historical Society for winning a Certificate of Commendation for the Rio Nuevo Project.

Maine Historical Society for winning a Certificate of Commendation for the Maine Memory Network.

Ohio Historical Society for winning a Certificate of Commendation for the restoration of the Paul Laurence Dunbar House.

Welcome to Our New Members

- Bob Beatty
  - Orlando, FL
- Tricia Blakistone
  - Raleigh, NC
- Jessamyn Boyd
  - Tallahassee, FL
- Ryan Boyd
  - Gouldsboro, ME
- Kelly Britt
  - Lancaster, PA
- Ann Buckn
  - Austin, TX
- Linnea Caproni
  - Tucson, AZ
- Mariela Cerchiari
  - Pensacola, FL
- Kendra Clauer-Remmer
  - Indianapolis, IN
- Wilton Cockern
  - Avon, IN
- Janet Davidson
  - Wilmington, NC
- Jackie Dow
  - Stony Brook, NY
- Heidi Dilan, Ensenada
  - Puerto Rico
- Deanna Dodson
  - Emporia, KS
- Karen Denham Downen
  - Tucker, GA
- Wendel Eckford
  - Pasadena, CA
- Angela Firkus
  - Nevada, MO
- Michael Flinton
  - Galaway, NY
- P. Ann Gillespie
  - Youngstown, WI
- Regina Goering
  - Hampton, VA
- David Grabitske
  - Saint Paul, MN
- Lew Hall
  - Springfield, MO
- Charles Hardy III
  - West Chester, PA
- Kenneth Heger
  - Columbus, MD
- Christine Heidtich
  - Silver Spring, MD
- Elizabeth Hoffman
  - Chicago, IL
- Don Hofsommer
  - St. Cloud, MN
- Rebecca Hunt
  - Denver, CO
- Scott Jarzombek
  - Albany, NY
- Suzanne Kelley
  - West Fargo, ND
- Nathaniel Kulyk
  - Washington D.C.
- James Marten
  - Milwaukee, WI
- Meredith Martin-Moats
  - Fayetteville, AR
- Kathleen McClean
  - Pittsburgh, PA
- R. Darrell Meadows
  - Fairfax, VA
- Trish Northcutt
  - Virginia Beach, VA
- Sarah Ogilvie
  - Washington D.C.
- Susan Porter
  - Brookline, MA
- Sandra Prueitt
  - York, PA
- Willeke Sandler
  - Brookline, MA
- Leslie Schilling
  - Lafayette, LA
- Kate Scrivener
  - Vancouver, WA
- Karen Serio
  - Placitas, NM
- Kellie Strickland
  - Wilmington, NC
- Tory Swim
  - Folsom, CA
- Matthew Tate
  - Antioch, TN
- Holly Watkins
  - Lafayette, LA
- Corinne Weible
  - Lakewood, OH
- Whitworth College
  - Spokane, WA
- Mary Wingard
  - Saint Cloud, MN
- Sally Wood
  - Middletown, WI

The National Council on Public History promotes the application of historical scholarship outside the university in government, business, historical societies, preservation organizations, archives, libraries, professional associations, and public interest groups.

For details contact NCPH President Robert Weible, The State Museum of Pennsylvania, 300 North Street, Harrisburg, PA 17120-0024; Phone: 717-783-9867; Email: rweible@state.pa.us or John R. Dichtl, NCPH Executive Director, Cavanaugh 327, IUPUI, 425 University Blvd., Indianapolis, IN 46202-5140; (317) 274-2716; E-mail: ncph@iupui.edu.

For change of address, write UC Press, 2000 Center St., Suite 303, Berkeley, CA 94704-1223.

Submissions to Public History News should be sent to John R. Dichtl, Editor, at the address above.
Library of Congress Advances Plan to Create World Digital Library

The Library of Congress is launching a campaign to create the World Digital Library, an online collection of rare books, manuscripts, posters, and other materials that would be freely available for viewing to Internet users. Because the goal is to bring materials together online from the United States and Europe, the Islamic world, Africa, and Asia, this appears to be the most ambitious effort ever undertaken in the realm of digital access.

According to Librarian of Congress James H. Billington, "We are aiming for a cooperative undertaking in which each culture can articulate its own cultural identity within a shared, global undertaking." He added that he envisions the initiative as a public-private partnership. Billington stated that already Google Inc. has become the first corporate contributor with a $3 million donation toward the project. The money will be used to develop the details of the project and to pay for global outreach.

NARA Funding Bill on Its Way to the President for Signature

On 18 November 2005, just before adjourning for its Thanksgiving recess, the United States Senate joined with the House of Representatives and passed by voice vote the conference report accompanying H.R. 3058 (H. Rept 109-307) the Treasury/Transportation appropriations bill for FY 2006. By agreeing to this report, Congress has agreed to appropriate funds for the National Archives and Records Administration (NARA) and the National Historical Publications and Records Commission (NHPRC). The legislation is on its way to President Bush for his signature.

Funding for NARA was set at just over $283 million. Congress also appropriated $7.5 million ($5.5 million for grants and $2 million for administration and staffing) to the NHPRC. Additionally, the bill provides $37.914 million for the Electronic Records Archives (ERA) project, which includes $22 million in multi-year funds that must be spent by September 2008.

As regular readers of this publication are aware, the history coalition's advocacy effort on behalf of the NHPRC this year was something of a challenge for the history and archives community. Now that all is said and done, a special thanks goes to NCH member organizations and others (most notably the National Humanities Alliance) for signing on to a letter forwarded to all the conference urging them to adopt the House budget recommendation ($5.5 million in grants; $2 million for administration and staffing) for the NHPRC. A special recognition for all the efforts throughout the year especially by NCH member groups the Association for Documentary Editing, Council of State Archivists, and the Society of American Archivists for their sustained effort to see that the NHPRC was not zeroed out this year as recommended by the White House.

While work on the Treasury/Transportation appropriations bill is now finished, there remain several other appropriations matters of interest to the history/archives communities that have yet to be completely resolved by Congress. Of greatest concern to the history community is the fate of H.R. 3010, the appropriation bill for the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education which includes funding for several history initiatives, including the $120 million "Teaching American History" initiative.

Rosa Parks Statue Authorized

On the eve of the 50th anniversary of Rosa Park's refusal to give up her bus seat in Montgomery, Alabama, the United States Senate and House of Representatives unanimously approved legislation that would authorize the Architect of the Capitol to commission a statue of her likeness to be placed in National Statuary Hall. The move will make Parks the first African-American women to be represented in this place of honor where states have placed statues depicting notable people in their history. Ironically, Parks' likeness will be placed not just among statues of former presidents of the United States but also individuals who played a prominent role in the former Confederacy, such as Jefferson Davis and Robert E. Lee. The bill gives the Architect of the Capitol two years to obtain a suitable statue.

The House version of the bill (H.R. 4145) was introduced by Rep. Jesse Jackson, Jr. (D-IL) and attracted a bi-partisan group of more than 200 co-sponsors. The Senate version (S. 1959) was introduced by Sen. John Kerry (D-MA) with 19 co-sponsors. The legislation has been sent to the White House, where it is expected to be signed into law by President Bush.

Congress Authorizes Battlefield Study Act

On 16 November 2005, Congress approved the Franklin National Battlefield Study Act, legislation (H.R. 1972) introduced by Representative Marsha Blackburn (R-TN), that authorizes the Secretary of the Interior to conduct a special resource study to determine the suitability and feasibility of including in the National Park System certain sites in Williamson County, Tennessee, relating to the Battle of Franklin.

On 30 November 1864, the Battle of Franklin became one of the bloodiest fights of the Civil War as well as one of the most significant. The ensuing battle resulted in 9,000 casualties,

> continued on page 13
Pennsylvania Historical & Museum Commission invites applications for its 2006-2007 Scholars in Residence Program, including applications for collaborative residencies. The Scholars in Residence program provides support for up to eight weeks of full-time research and study in manuscript and artifact collections maintained by any Commission facility, including the Pennsylvania State Archives, The State Museum of Pennsylvania, and twenty-five historic sites and museums around the state. Collaborative residencies fund original analytic and/or synthetic research that relates to the interpretive mission and advances the programmatic goals of a PHMC program or facility, including the agency’s historic sites and museums. A collaborative residency application must be filed jointly by the interested scholar and host program/facility. For a full description of the residency program and application materials, as well as information about Commission research collections, go to the PHMC website: www.phmc.state.pa.us. You may also write: Scholars in Residence Program, Bureau of Archives and History, Pennsylvania Historical and Museum Commission, Commonwealth Keystone Building – Plaza Level, 400 North St., Harrisburg, PA 17120-0053; or call: 717/787-3034; or email: RA-PHMC Scholars@state.pa.us. Deadline for application is 13 January 2006.

The Lemelson Center Fellows Program supports projects that present creative approaches to the study of invention and innovation in American society. These include, but are not limited to, historical research and documentation projects resulting in publications, exhibitions, educational initiatives, and multimedia products. The fellowship program provides access to the Smithsonian’s vast artifact and archival collections, as well as the expertise of the Institution’s research staff.

The Center offers fellowships to scholars and professionals who are pre- or postdoctoral candidates or who have completed advanced professional training. Fellowships are awarded for a maximum of ten weeks and carry a prorated stipend. The deadline for applications is 15 January 2006. Application materials are available on the web at invention.smithsonian.org/resources/research_fellowships.aspx or contact: Maggie Dennis, Fellowships Coordinator, National Museum of American History, Rm. 1016, MRC 604, Smithsonian Institution, P.O. Box 37012, Washington, D.C. 20013-7012. Tel: 202-633-3441. Fax: 202-357-4517. E-mail: dennism@si.edu

The Gilder Lehrman Institute of American History invites applications for short-term fellowships for scholars and postdoctoral candidates who have completed exams and begun dissertation research and writing. The Gilder Lehrman Fellowships support work in one of five archives in New York City: The Gilder Lehrman Collection, on deposit at the New-York Historical Society, the Library of the New-York Historical Society, the Columbia University Rare Book and Manuscript Library, the New York Public Library, and the Schomburg Center for Research in Black Culture. For more information, visit the institute’s webpage at: www.gilderlehrman.org. Application deadline is 1 May 2006.

The National Council on Public History invites you to submit articles for its quarterly newsletter, Public History News. We welcome stories concerning innovative public programs, project updates, important issues concerning public history, interesting collaborations, and new approaches being used to bring history to the public. Articles for Public History News should be approximately 750 to 1000 words in length; illustrations accepted as appropriate. Submissions and questions can be sent via email to: ncph@iupui.edu or surface mail to: NCPH, 327 Cavanaugh Hall-IUPUI, 425 University Boulevard, Indianapolis, IN 46202.

Papers are invited for contributions to the Memory and Narration – Oral History Research in the Northern European Context symposium hosted by the Finnish Literature Society in collaboration with the Graduate School of Cultural Interpretations, the Department of Folklore Studies, University of Helsinki and the Finnish Oral History Network (FOHN) in Finland November 15-17, 2006. The Memory and Narration – Oral History Research in the Northern European Context symposium is the first international symposium organized by the Finnish Oral History Network. The aim of this conference is to bring together a large number of scholars in the broader field of the humanities and social sciences whom are focused on methodological issues within oral history research in Northern Europe and to stimulate discussion on the methods and theories used in oral history research. We welcome all scholars working within the field of oral history and life history. The program will include plenary sessions and thematic panel sessions. To ensure the widest possible participation, the principal conference language will be English. If you are interested, please send us a single page proposal including an outline of your paper and the following details: name (with your surname in CAPITAL letters), affiliation, postal address, e-mail address, telephone and fax numbers. Proposals will be evaluated according to their focus on oral history and methodological and theoretical relevance. We encourage proposals which focus on oral history in the Northern European context. Proposals must be written in English.

Please email your proposal as an e-mail attachment by 31 March 2006 to hum-fohn@helsinki.fi. The acceptance or rejection of proposals will be announced by 30 April 2006. The papers will be available to symposium participants via the WebCT "Oral history research in the Nordic-Baltic area" (http://webct.euni.ee/public/TUOHaLHR itNBA/index.html). The deadline for the papers is 31 August 2006.

The Public Historian invites contributions for "The Public and Private History of Eugenics." In 1883, Francis Galton coined the term eugenics and defined it as: "the science of improving stock - to give the more suitable races or strains of blood a better chance of prevailing speedily over the less suitable than they otherwise would have had." Between the late nineteenth and early twenty-first centuries, under the expansive rubric of "race betterment," eugenics was wide-ranging and accorded scientific, political, and popular support. In the United States, over the course of the twentieth century, eugenics encompassed Progressive reform efforts to secure improved maternal and infant health care, racially motivated immigration policies, and coercive sterilization legislation. In its most virulent form, eugenics provided the impetus for race-based genocide during the Holocaust. Even before World War II, state-ordered sterilization accelerated in some states, and eugenicists found a new arena in population control and family planning. In more recent years, eugenics has resurfaced within academia and the echoes of eugenics have been detected in stem-cell research and specialty sperm and egg donor firms.

The shameful aspect of eugenics has compelled Governors of California, Virginia, South Carolina and North Carolina to publicly apologize for their states' eugenics policies, particularly in regard to sterilization and reproductive surgeries. This issue will explore the challenges of researching and writing about eugenics in all of its variations. We welcome submissions about all aspects of eugenics history, especially those focusing on bringing the history of eugenics to the public. Submissions may include research articles, eugenics policy history, case studies of archival collections, and exhibition or website reviews. Possible topics include: forced or coercive sterilization campaigns; historical perspectives on cloning, in-vitro fertilization and sperm banks; consumer eugenics; stereotypical images and the history of normalcy; local, state-level and/or institutional efforts to expose or hide eugenics; development of exhibits or websites on the history of eugenics; native communities and eugenics; recovering the stories of the sterilized through oral history; and teaching eugenics in academia and to the public. Please submit a one-page proposal and short vita listing relevant qualifications by 15 January 2006 to: Lindsey Reed, Managing Editor, The Public Historian. Department of History, University of California, Santa Barbara, CA 93106. Email: lreed@ltsc.ucsb.edu.

Proposals that build on American Indian culture, traditions, customs and life ways are of particular interest. One may propose any aspect of: film; theater; literature; poetry; oral tradition; myth; legend; philosophy; arts (painting; sculpture; weaving; basketry; pottery; dance; music, etc.); fashion; artifacts; American Indian foods; journalism; imagery in mainstream media; photography; anthropology; archaeology; identity; cultural and spiritual appropriation; stereotypes, mascots, etc. I am interested in all aspects of American Indian culture. Send an abstract of 100-250 words. Inquiries regarding any topical area or the formation of a panel presentation should be directed to me and I will be pleased to accommodate.

Richard L. Allen, Area Chair, American Indians Today, Cherokee Nation. P.O. Box 948. Tahlequah, Oklahoma 74465. (918) 456-0671 Ext. 2466. Email: rallen@cherokee.org.

Borderlands IV: Organizing History- People, Places, Trails, and Local Stories June 9-11, 2006, The National Underground Railroad Freedom Center, Cincinnati, OH; and Northern Kentucky University's Institute for Freedom Studies, Highland Heights, KY invite presenters to submit a proposal for our annual UGRR conference. The purpose of this conference is to further collaboration among the academic and lay communities in researching, sharing and bringing to public attention, knowledge and accurate information about UGRR. Papers on contemporary slavery are also desired. For the full text of the Call please visit the Institute's website: http://www.nku.edu/~freedom

Deadline for proposals due 2 February 2006.
Venue: Institute of Historical Research, University of London, Senate House, Malet Street, London, WC1E 7HU, United Kingdom. Contact: Richard Butler, Institute of Historical Research, University of London, Senate House, London, WC1E 7HU, United Kingdom. Email: ihr.events@sas.ac.uk. Visit the website at http://www.history.ac.uk.

The Center for Black Diaspora, African Identities: Journal of Economy, Culture and Society (Routledge) and the University of South Africa Press are pleased to announce an international conference on “Theorizing African/Black Diaspora: History and Memory” to be held at DePaul University, 19-20 May 2006. The conference explores the intellectual history, analytical and interrogative discourses that constitute the distinctive and interdisciplinary field of African/Black Diaspora Studies in the production of knowledge of the deterritorialised and transnational nature of the African/Black Diaspora. It will provide a venue for a critical exploration of history and memory and how these ideas illuminate the movement (geographic, cultural, political and psychological) of the African/Black Diaspora in the context of globalized and transnational spaces. A proposal of approximately 300 words should be sent to the organizing committee by 30 January 2006. Conference Organizing Committee Center for Black Diaspora, DePaul University, 2320 N. Kenmore Avenue, Chicago, Illinois 60614-3250. Proposals can be submitted by e-mail as a Microsoft attachment, with a subject reading “Theorizing African/Black Diaspora” to: bdiaspora@depaul.edu.

Contact: Fassil Demissie, Public Policy Center for Diaspora Studies in the production of Economy, University of South Africa Press, at DePaul University, 19-20 May 2006. Conference Organizing Committee Center for Black Diaspora, DePaul University, 2320 N. Kenmore Avenue, Chicago, Illinois 60614-3250. Proposals can be submitted by e-mail as a Microsoft attachment, with a subject reading “Theorizing African/Black Diaspora” to: bdiaspora@depaul.edu.Visit the website at http://condor.depaul.edu/~diaspora.

The National Preservation Institute, a nonprofit organization founded in 1980, educates those involved in the management, preservation, and stewardship of our cultural heritage. Seminars bring distinguished faculty to highlight state-of-the-art practice in important areas of historic preservation and cultural resource management. Seminars focus on enhancing the skills of professionals responsible for the preservation, protection, and interpretation of historic, archeological, architectural, and cultural resources. Sample seminars include Archaeological Curation, Conservation, and Collections Management; Cemetery Preservation; and Consultation and Protection of Native American Sacred Lands. Case studies and small group exercise focus on the information, technology, and skills which effective managers require in today’s changing preservation environment. NPI can provide on-site and customized training to meet specific organizational needs. For more information, call 703.765.0100 or email info@npi.org. Our website is www.npi.org.

“History and the Public” “History and the Public” will investigate the use of history for public purposes and the involvement of the public in the consumption and study of history. Plenary speakers will be Liz Forgan (Heritage Lottery Fund), Ludmilla Jordanova (King’s College London), Darryl McIntyre (Museum of London), Charles Saumarez Smith (The National Gallery) and John Tosh (Roehampton University). The conference will focus chiefly on the United Kingdom but will also examine comparative material from different countries and cultures. There will also be parallel sessions featuring speakers drawn from government bodies, universities, historic sites and museums.

Date: 13-14 February 2006

The award-winning Virtual Oral/Aural History Archive, now has made available the 1100 hours of original oral history recordings of some 343 people, including African Americans, American Indians, Asian Americans, Latinos/as and Southern and Eastern European immigrants. They range from farm laborers to professionals, from social reformers/community activists to anarchists and communists, from ventriloquists to jazz arrangers. Their narratives, organized in 30 series, document the US experience, 1890s to 1990s. They are broken into organic time segments that are summarized and assigned search terms, enabling users to locate relevant segments by search terms or, alternatively, to browse the collection hierarchy and listen to entire tapes or selected segments. Contact: Sherna Berger Gluck and Kaye Briegel. California State University, Long Beach. Department of History. Phone: 562-985-5428. F: 562-985-5431. Email: kbriegel@csulb.edu. Visit the website at http://www.csulb.edu/voaha.
History students from American University have collaborated to create something which they hope will be useful as a tool in the future for those studying history. As a group of dedicated students at American University, they have taken on the task of compiling a database of memoirs they hope will provide first hand accounts of important people, places, and events for public consumption and use. If you have an interesting story, please take the time and visit their site, www.memorywiki.org and share your stories. We are willing to accept all sorts of memoirs in all sorts of languages, and we hope you will help us achieve our goal of building a wealth of first hand knowledge. Why are we doing this? As our slogan says: “Everyone has a Story, Make Yours History”.

---

Material Culture, the Journal of the Pioneer America Society, a peer-reviewed publication, announces a call for book reviewers. Currently, nearly 300 books are available for review; a list of those books is available at: http://www.castleton.edu/~scr10240/books.html.

Book review guidelines can be found at: http://www.castleton.edu/~scr10240/mc.html.

Book reviews should be between approximately 800 and 1400 words and are contracted through the Book Review Editor. Submissions need not be from Pioneer America Society members, though membership in the society is encouraged. If you are interested in reviewing a book for Material Culture, please contact Dr. Scott Roper, the Book Review Editor.

The Pioneer America Society is a national, not-for-profit organization that encourages the study and preservation of buildings, sites, structures and objects representing North American history, cultural landscapes and material culture. Organized in 1967, the Society carries out its mission by identifying, documenting, analyzing and interpreting significant cultural landscapes, architecture and artifacts and by encouraging educational programs, scholarly research and preservation.

For more information about the Pioneer America Society, visit our website at: http://www.pioneeramerica.org.

Scott C. Roper, Book Review Editor, Dept. of History, Geography, Economics, & Politics, Leavenworth Hall, Castleton State College, 6 Alumni Drive, Castleton, VT 05735. Phone: 802/468-1270. Email: scott.roper@castleton.edu. Visit the website at http://www.castleton.edu/~scr10240/books.html.

---

JOBS AND POSITIONS AVAILABLE

The history department at CSU-San Bernardino seeks applications for a tenure-track assistant professorship in Public and Oral history, beginning in September 2006. Teaching/research expertise in California strongly preferred. The successful candidate will teach upper-division courses in Public/Oral and California history, lower-division survey courses in U.S. and California history, and required topical curriculum according to department needs. S/he also will help direct student internships, produce scholarly research, and provide service to the university and the community. Salary will be commensurate with background and experience. PhD required by September 2006. Submit letter of application, current c.v., three letters of recommendation, and official transcript to Dr. Pedro Santoni, Chair, History Department, CSU-San Bernardino, 5500 University Parkway, San Bernardino, CA 92407. CSU-San Bernardino is an EO/AA. Application deadline: 23 December 2005, or until filled. Contact Info: Dr. Pedro Santoni, Chair. History Department, CSU San Bernardino, 5500 University Parkway San Bernardino, CA 92407. (909) 537-5524. Email: psantoni@csusb.edu. Website: http://csbs.csusb.edu/history/

Historic New England is seeking a Museum Historian for Regular/Full-Time (40 hours/wk) position available: ASAP. Location: Otis House Museum - Boston, MA.

Primary Function: This research historian position is responsible for managing and coordinating the social history research needs for Historic New England museums and programs, and for providing results of the research to staff and the public.

Primary Responsibilities: Develops and maintains a multi-year social history research plan for the organization. Generates research products to support property interpretation including contextual research reports and thematic essays in conjunction with the Proactive Preservation and Interpretation Planning (PPIP) committee. Conducts research for exhibitions and may review exhibition material including label copy, panel copy, and any publications for consistency with research findings. Works with Library and Archives staff on discrete research projects as assigned and assists with research inquiries as needed. Coordinates Historic New England's internship and fellowship program. Recruits and supervises social history research interns. Coordinates intern projects with other staff, and disseminates results. Works with Historic New England magazine editor to prepare intern/fellow research products as stimulating magazine articles. Presents research findings at internal and public...
CALL FOR ANNUAL MEETING SITE PROPOSALS

The National Council on Public History seeks site proposals for its annual meetings beginning in the year 2009.

Proposals should include the following information:

- A statement of why the site is appropriate for the NCPH annual meeting.
- Information regarding support from local individuals, institutions, and agencies that could work together to plan a successful conference. Letters of intent would strengthen the proposal.
- Potential arrangements for meeting facilities, hotels, and transportation, with approximate costs.
- Proposed dates for the meeting, generally between 15 March and 1 May.
- Any other details that might strengthen the proposal.

Since the NCPH Board of Directors considers proposals at its spring and fall meetings, a representative or representatives of the host institution(s) should plan to present and discuss the site proposal.

For more information, contact the NCPH Executive Offices at 317.274.2716 or by email: ncp@iupui.edu

Send completed proposals to:
NCPH Executive Offices
IUPUI 425 University Boulevard
Cavanaugh 327
Indianapolis, Indiana 46202-5140

meetings, lectures, symposia, and other presentations. Works with site staff and headquarters staff to evaluate research needs at the properties. Advises, directs and mentors site staff in research projects undertaken outside of the social history research plan. Maintains research files and assists staff with file access/utilization. Contributes articles to Historic New England magazine and Old Time New England. Collects and manages oral history information. Conducts oral history training for staff. May be assigned to additional institution-wide interdisciplinary projects.

Qualifications: Requires a minimum of a Master’s degree in American Studies and/or History with at least 5 years of job-related experience. Experience working with material culture, preferably in a museum setting, is required. Requires advanced word processing and database skills as well as strong verbal and written communication skills. Requires proven track record for conducting product oriented research within specific schedules. Requires valid driver’s license.

Applications: Please send resume/cover letter to: Ryan Thibodeau – HR Manager, Historic New England, 141 Cambridge Street; Boston, MA 02114 fax: 617-227-9204 or rthibodeau@HistoricNewEngland.org

The History Department at the Natural History Museum of Los Angeles County is seeking an accomplished Curator of California and American History. The curator will provide leadership to staff, volunteers, scholars, and the general public, according to professional standards and procedures. The curator is expected to make significant contributions to exhibitions and special projects; to enhance and promote the collection; and to seek and administer support through grants and other funding opportunities. Major responsibilities include: Active oversight of all functions involving California and American History three-dimensional artifact collections such as direction of the H-Cat (electronic catalogue of History Department collections); direct supervision of two collections managers, grant project staff, and varying numbers of volunteers, student workers, and interns; coordination of acquisitions; support of the collections through fundraising, initiating and writing grant proposals, and managing grants; collaborating with the Institute for California and the West at the University of Southern California and other institutions in history programming initiatives. Prominent participation in History Department and museum-wide activities such as strategic planning; content development for exhibitions and special projects in collaboration with the Public Programs Branch; committee and other institutional service activities and initiatives. Production of research-based publications in peer-reviewed and popular journals, magazines, and books based on original research, using the collections wherever possible; presentation of research and programming results at scholarly conferences; submission of proposals and obtaining funding to support research; publicizing the collections and staff accomplishments and expertise; promotion of the California and American History artifact collections and programs through seminars, exhibitions, and response to inquiries from outside researchers, staff, docents, and volunteers.

Qualifications: PhD in American History with specialization in California and the West, plus significant direct experience with historical materials in a museum, research library, historical society, or archives setting, preferably with supervisory or team leadership experience; proven record with fundraising and connections to the scholarly community; familiarity with electronic cataloguing and collections management tools; understanding of conservation standards and treatments.
The successful candidate for this position will be hired at the Curator or Associate Curator level, depending on qualifications. Annual salary will be based on qualifications and experience. Review of applications begins as soon as they are received. Letters of application, including a complete resume or C.V., and the names and contact information for three references, should be sent via U.S. mail to: Janet Fireman, Curator of History, Natural History Museum, 900 Exposition Boulevard, Los Angeles, CA 90007. Website: http://www.nhm.org

John Nicholas Brown Center Public Humanities Fellowships

Brown University's John Nicholas Brown Center for the Study of American Civilization is pleased to announce two new fellowship programs.

JNBC Community Fellows. These short-term fellowships for staff at Southern New England cultural institutions are intended to encourage thoughtful reflection on the recipient's ongoing work, as well as to provide a chance to discuss that work with Brown students, faculty, and other public humanists. Applications are particularly encouraged from those who have recently completed a project and are interested in writing about it. From one week to one month in length; these fellowships provide a place to work, access to Brown University libraries, and a stipend of $1500 per month. JNBC Community Fellows are expected to make a presentation on their work to the JNBC Public Humanities Colloquium, and to write, for publication on the JNBC website, a short essay on the practical, philosophical and community issues they deal with in their ongoing public humanities work. Individuals whose recent work includes exhibitions, the connections of cultural and educational institutions, or community outreach are especially encouraged to apply.

JNBC Public Humanities Fellows. These fellowships are intended to encourage writing on issues of the public humanities. Available for periods of up to three months, and open to academics, staff at cultural organizations, and independent scholars, the Public Humanities Fellows will provide a place to work, access to Brown University libraries, participation in a community of interested faculty, students, and public humanists, and a stipend of $1500 per month. JNBC Public Humanities Fellows are expected to make a presentation on their work to the JNBC Public Humanities Colloquium, and to write, for publication on the JNBC website, a short essay on the subject of their fellowship.

About the John Nicholas Brown Center: The John Nicholas Brown Center is Brown University's center for the public humanities. It supports student and faculty projects that connect the public to history, art, and culture, and sponsors programs that consider the ways in which the humanities enrich everyday life. To carry out its mission, the Center conducts programs and activities focused in three major areas:

Education: The JNBC educates tomorrow's practitioners of the public humanities, and supports today's practitioners, through a program of graduate, postgraduate and continuing education.

Outreach and Community Involvement: The JNBC encourages and showcases public humanities at Brown, the community, and affiliated institutions, including RISD.

Historic Preservation and Documentation: The JNBC preserves and documents the historic Nightingale-Brown house and related information and artifacts.

To Apply: Applications, with a two- to three-page description of your project, a short curriculum vitae, two letters of recommendation, and the duration and schedule of your proposed fellowship should be sent to:

Fellowships
John Nicholas Brown Center
Brown University Box 1892
Providence, RI 02912

Deadline for application to the fellowship program is 15 February 2006.
The following Patrons and Sponsors have demonstrated their commitment to NCPH in 2005 by providing additional funds to support our programs and operations. NCPH greatly appreciates the continued support of these institutions.

Super Patron
The History Channel

Patrons
American Association for State and Local History
Department of History, Indiana University Purdue University Indianapolis
Historical Research Associates, Inc.
National Park Service

Sponsors
Arizona State University
Department of History
University of Arkansas
Little Rock, Department of History
California State University Chico
Department of History
University of California Riverside
Department of History
California State University Sacramento, Department of History
Carnegie-Mellon University
Department of History
James Madison University
Department of History
Loyola University of Chicago
Department of History
University of Maryland
Baltimore County, Department of History
Middle Tennessee State University
Department of History
Oklahoma State University
Department of History
University of South Carolina
Department of History
State University of New York Albany
Department of History
Texas State University-San Marcos
Department of History
Washington State University
Department of History
University of Waterloo, Canada
Department of History
University of West Georgia
Department of History
Western Michigan University
Department of History
Wichita State University
Department of History
Chicago Historical Society
JRP Historical Consulting
Missouri Historical Society
ODAM/Historical Office
Department of Defense
Pennsylvania Historical and Museum Commission
Truman Presidential Library

For information about becoming a Patron or Sponsor, please contact NCPH Executive Director, John R. Dichtl at 317.274.2718 or email him at ncph@ncph.org.

Thank You For Your Support
The Homeless of Central Florida

For the interviews two weeks later, the Director Leo Devlin asked people he knew had lived at the center for the three hurricanes. I then asked the manager if either Hercules or Patrick was still at the Center but they had moved on.

Patrick actually reported a higher state of good will shown by the general population to the homeless population who were willing to work. He was brought drinks, food, and even taken to an expensive restaurant, Kobe’s Steak House, where an average meal can cost over twenty dollars, as a token of appreciation. Patrick furthermore reports he obtained employment with a roofing company as a direct result of the hurricanes.

5 Leo Devlin is the director of the men’s shelter at the Coalition. He is a remarkable man who devotes time to this demanding job, his doctoral studies, and his family.

Luke Leonard and C. Reider Howe are graduate history students at the University of Central Florida.

From President’s Comments

If the past few months have been critical ones for NCPH, then the next ones will be equally consequential. John Dichtl will be starting his new job in January, just a few months before our annual conference. Fortunately, this year’s conference is being sponsored jointly with OAH, and John has been working on the program for the past year. John will also be learning about NCPH from the inside during the coming months, and I know that, during his transition, he will benefit greatly from the support and capable assistance of our Assistant to the Director, Dana Ward. David Vanderstel, who has agreed to stay onboard for a short period of time, from Phil Scarpino, Melissa Bingmann, Liz Monroe, Michael Snodgrass, and John’s other colleagues in the IUPUI history department, and from the officers, board and committee members, and members of NCPH.

I look forward to seeing everyone this spring at what promises to be a great conference. The program committee has worked hard to ensure that there are plenty of good public history sessions on the program, the local arrangements committee has arranged various on site sessions and tours, Marianne Balal and the endowment fundraiser committee have made plans for another memorable and worthwhile event, and Washington, as you know, is truly wonderful in the spring.
NCPH MEMBERSHIP APPLICATION

Special 15% Introductory Offer for New Members

I would like to become a member of the National Council on Public History and receive a year's subscription to The Public Historian and Public History News as part of my new membership.

- Individual $55.25 (regular, $65.00)
- Student (with copy of ID) $21.25 (regular, $25.00)
- New Professional $29.75 (regular, $35.00)
- US Institution $115.00 (regular, $140.00)

Outside USA? Please add $20.00 to cover postage.

Canada residents add 7% GST (R122058662)

Name______________________________

Organization & Dept. ________________________________

Address or Bldg. & Mail Code ________________________________

City/State/Country/Zip______________________________

Email______________________________

---

Mail to: University of California Press
2000 Center St., Suite 303 Berkeley, CA 94704-1223,
Email: jorders@ucpress.ucop.edu

Payment Options:
- Check enclosed. (Payable to the UC Regents)
- Purchase Order. (Enclosed-prepayment required)
- Visa ○ Mastercard Expiration Date__________

Account#________________________________

Signature________________________________

---

Special memberships are also available

- Sponsor $300 ○ Patron $500

Please direct inquiries and payments for these memberships to NCPH Executive Offices, 425 University Blvd, Indianapolis, IN 46202, 317-274-2716.

Payments to NCPH are not deductible as charitable contributions for federal income tax purposes. However, they may be deductible under other provisions of the Internal Revenue Code. NCPH tax number: 52-1210-174

---

Public History News

National Council on Public History
327 Cavanaugh Hall-IUPUI
425 University Blvd
Indianapolis, IN 46202-5140

ISSN 08912610

Editor: David G. Vanderstel
Editorial Assistants: Monica Casanova and Dana Ward